City's Budget Hiked, County's Reduced

Hopes Dim for $47,000 Boost

City's Requests $81,760 Higher Than '42 Bill.

Anticipating sharp reductions in the city's share of state gasoline tax and automobile registration funds, the finance committee of city council last night boosted the city's 1943 budget request more than $47,000.

The increase brought the new total requested to $386,113, which is $41,888 more than the city asked for 1942 and $81,760 more than it actually received for operations in 1941.

It appeared doubtful, however, that the city would receive the large increase it has asked for 1943 operations. County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said today that the city might get an additional $5,000 or $6,000 because of the increased valuation due to the construction of several new homes but stated he did not expect any major increase

Wolfe made his statement in announcing the county's $451,750 budget request for 1943. He said that the county faced a reduction in anticipated revenue and that there was no point in asking for more than could be received.

Russell D. Porch, chairman of the finance committee, said that "although it appears the city is requesting an increase in operating funds, it is actually asking for less."

"We estimate that our share of the state funds will be reduced more than we are increasing our budget request," said Porch. "Because of these expected reductions, we have attempted to earmark part of our general fund for street construction. Previously, this street work was carried out solely with our share of state funds."

Biggest changes in the tentative budget, which is scheduled to get a public hearing at the municipal building Tuesday at 8 p. m., were in the street, parks, storm sewer, police, relief, and fire pension funds.

The street and storm sewer funds were increased while the parks, police, relief and fire pension funds were given cuts.

The budget proposed by the administration called for a street repair fund of only $2,460, most of which was to be used to pay the salary of the superintendent of streets.

Upon the recommendation of City Auditor Paul L. Kelley, who County's Figure $11,000 Below '42 Expenses.

Richland county commissioners today set up a county operating budget request calling for $451,750 next year, or $11,554 less than was actually appropriated for county expenses in 1942. This year's request was for $463,304, the amount the county received.

The request for 1943 funds was made to coincide with the estimated revenue which Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said would be available to the county next year.

"We have a pretty good idea of the amount of tax revenue we'll have during the coming year, and there's no point in requesting several thousand dollars more than we know we can get," the auditor said.

"It's the tax duplicate that determines how much the subdivisions will receive during a year, although some of them still have the idea that the way to prepare a budget is to ask for more than they think they'll get and hope they can get a part of what they asked for."

"The county budget commission hasn't much authority any more since the 10-mill limitation law went into effect," he said. "All the commission can do is allocate what the law says the cities, townships and villages can have."

He said estimated county revenue will be down about $40,000 in 1943 from the $490,555 the county will receive in 1942. Curtailment of retail buying will reduce sales tax revenue and fees received by county offices, while wartime conditions are expected to slash the personal tax revenue on intangible property, Auditor Wolfe said.

Increased real estate valuations as a result of new business and residence construction will produce more real estate tax money in 1943, but not enough to offset

'Foxes of Desert' Fight for Suez Canal

Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck — Field Marshal Erwin Rommel

Known as the "Fox of the Desert" Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel appeared to have been out-foxed today by a crafty maneuver of forces under the command of Gen. Claude Auchinleck in northern Egypt. Rommel in a lightning drive had brought his Axis columns to El Alameim, 70 miles from Alexandria, where the British Eighth army brought him to a halt in a furious three-day tank and air battle. Last night the British circled Rommel's force, attacking from the rear in what may prove a maneuver to trap the enemy between the sea and the Qattara marshes. On the outcome of the battle hinges control of the vital Suez canal.

NATION FACES SHOWDOWN ON PRICE CONTROL

Henderson-Congress Struggle Over Funds Reveals Deeper Conflict.

CEILING PUNCTURED

Legislators Charged With 15 Per Cent Increase In Canned Fruit Cost.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The administration's anti-inflation program is faltering today and heading the nation toward a spectacular showdown on domestic economic policies.

At the moment the show is being ballyhooed as a contest between Price Administrator Leon Henderson and the administration on oneside and congress on the other.

But that is not a fair representation. Instead, it is a battle royal — no holds barred — in which meet the special and superficially conflicting interests of politicians, farmers, wage earners, employers, housewives, manufacturers, motorists, oil leaders, bond holders and the rest of us, if any.

Henderson returns today to Capitol Hill. He will continue his effort to convince a senate appropriations subcommittee that his office should have in this fiscal year $161,000,000 instead of $75,000,000 with all the additional employes and scope the greater sum would provide. He also believes the government must adopt a subsidy program to enable some manufacturers and growers to maintain their operations under the price ceilings imposed in May.

Yesterday's subcommittee meeting was a noisy engagement in which the voices of Henderson and committee members boomed through closed doors to reveal the vigorous and fundamental character of the differences under discussion.

The price ceiling was badly holded Wednesday when Henderson was compelled to authorize an increase of 15 per cent—perhaps more—in the price of the 1942 crop of canned and dried fruits. Henderson's announcement and a supplementary radio address by Budget Director Harold D. Smith were interpreted by some persons as having charged to congress blame for threatened bogging of anti-inflation policies.

Some congressmen are angry because Henderson's vast proposed

Twilight Tank Battle Blasts Foe's Advance

Axis Columns Withdraw Under Violent Attacks From Air; Auchinleck Force Surprises Enemy With Thrust At Rear; Red Front Flames.

BULLETIN

STOCKHOLM—(UP)—American troops are fighting with the British imperial army at El Alamein in Egypt, the Berlin correspondent of the newspaper Allehanda reported today, quoting German advices from Egypt.

(By Associated Press)

Britain's Egyptian armies, rallying at the eleventh hour, were reported to have thrown the Axis invasion into reverse in the flaming three-day "battle of the bottleneck" today, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

A bulletin from British imperial headquarters said Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's tank army "withdrew to the west, leaving our positions intact," after a fierce tank battle last evening at El Alamein, 65 milest west of Alexandria.

Italian headquarters yesterday claimed the capture of El Alamein, which was described as the last British stronghold guarding the great Alexandria naval base.

Front-line dispatches said the twilight tank battle in the desert, the first major setback for Gen. Rommel's armies in their sweep toward the Nile, climaxed bitter all-day fighting in which the invaders launched a general attack against El Alamein.

"Our mobile and armored forces counter-attacked the enemy flanks," a British communique said, inflicting such heavy losses that Rommel called a retreat.

"Throughout the battle our light bombers, fighter bombers and fighters were employed in increasing numbers and heavily attacked enemy concentrations southwest of El Alamein," the British said.

Italy's high command, locating the scene of battle as "southeast of El Alamein," asserted that 2,000 more British troops had been captured and declared Axis operations were developing favorably.

"Strong enemy forces were wiped out," the Italian communique said.

The British communique reporting the German-Italian invaders had withdrawn west of El Alamein disrupted the Axis claim yesterday that Rommel's forces had broken through the main British position.

El Alamein is the northern anchor of the 35-mile British line protecting the "bottleneck" gateway to Alexandria. The line extends from the Mediterranean coastal escarpment to the desolate Quattara salt sink.

Bolstered by "very considerable reinforcements," which Prime Minister Churchill announced yesterday were arriving at the front, Gen. Sir Claud Auchinleck's imperial armies were said to be throwing everything they had into the struggle to save Egypt and perhaps the entire Middle East.

Dispatches from the front even hinted that Gen. Rommel, known as "the fox of the desert," may have fallen into as neat a trap as he ever devised for the British.

These dispatches said a flying column of British tanks and mobile artillery swept around Rom-

FARMERS START BIG HARVEST

Wheat Crop One of Best In Recent Years, Agent Says; Storage Puzzle Ahead.

Harvesting of Richland county's bumper wheat crop was under way today in the southern port of the county, but farmers were not expected to bump up against the grain storage problem until threshing starts in a week or ten days.

Although damaged in some sections by rust and heavy rainfall, the county's crop will be one of the best in recent years, according to County Agent George B. Ganyard.

Combines, the big machines that cut and thresh the grain in the same operation, will go into action next week when the grain is riper. Now, only binders are working, cutting the grain for threshing later.

Answers Plymouth Charge, Says More Funds Available

Replying to a charge by Mayor J. B. Derr of Plymouth that the northern Richland county village has been "slighted" in the allocation of civilian defense money, Ray Hout, county civilian defense chairman, told the mayor today that less than one-fourth of the county's $18,500 defense fund has been allocated, and Plymouth is certain to get a larger share of it.

Mayor Derr protested to state civilian defense headquarters that the village had received only $50 from Richland county, while the Huron county budget commission allocated $115 to Plymouth. The village is on the county line with about half of it in each county.

"I'm sure there is a misunderstanding in Plymouth of the plan we are using to allocate civilian defense funds to cities and villages," Hout said.

"Plymouth has received $50 to get the program under way there,

Record Crowd Expected for Tomorrow's Fireworks Show

Along with the rest of a nation fighting to protect the freedom it won in past wars, Mansfield tomorrow celebrates its first wartime Independence Day in a quarter-century.

Because of the particular significance of the occasion during these days of a new world war, and because of the anticipated reduction in holiday travel due to rationing, the committee arranging tomorrow's celebration at the fairground expects an all-time record crowd.

Last year it was estimated that 30,000 persons—many of them in the grounds and others on hillsides and similar vantage points throughout the area, watched the fireworks which is always the big feature of the day's program.

Again tomorrow the fireworks will be a highlight of the day's celebration. The fairgrounds program starts at 3 p. m. and continues through until about 10:30, except for an intermission of one hour, starting at 6:15. The fireworks will start at 9:45.

Ed Wyllie, chairman of the Mansfield Public Parks association committee in charge of the celebration, emphasized that use of the fireworks will not consume any vital war materials or in any other way interfere with the war program.

308,487 Pounds Collected To July 1 Puts Richland High Up in Leader List.

Richland county stacks up favorably against all other counties in Ohio in the results to date in the scrap collection, according to figures released today by the state salvage committee in Columbus.

The figures showed that Richland county, with a collection of 308,487 pounds up to July 1, was 11th among the state's 88 counties. It was exceeded only by the home counties of the eight cities in the state with a population of more than 100,000, and by Allen and Trumbull counties.

Trumbull county, with a population of 132,315, had a collection up to July 1 of 444,000 pounds, and

Army Agent Trails Espionage Plot to 'King of Belize'

U. S. ARMY HEADQUARTERS, PANAMA CANAL ZONE—(AP)—An army intelligence officer who braved poison plots and saboteurs to trail a band of Axis spies through Central American harbor towns has bagged the ringleader known as "The King of Belize" and 19 of his assistants engaged in refuelling German submarines and spotting Allied shipping.

The network, spread all the way from Panama to British Honduras, has been cracked and the hunt is on for other enemy agents, Lieut. Gen. Frank Andrews, Caribbean defense commander announced yesterday.

From night clubs and taxi dance halls through shipping offices and into the Panama Canal zone where trusted employes were discovered working for the enemy, the trail led to Belize, British Honduras, where a jungle spy leader, posing as a business man, directed operations.

The hunt began from a tip given by an American sea patrol plane

ASSIST: British and Canadian Ships Help U. S. Fight U-boats

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Naval experts today welcomed news that many British and Canadian vessels have been operating with American naval forces in the Atlantic "for some time" in the anti-submarine warfare.

The navy department disclosed for the first time that British and Canadian corvettes, destroyers and "fully-equipped anti-submarine vessels" are augmenting convoy escorts and submarine patrols.

How long the British and Canadian vessels have been operating directly with American ships was not disclosed, but it was announced last week that Atlantic coast-wise shipping had been escorted by naval vessels for the previous month.

Secretary of the Navy Knox recently told a congressional committee that the off-shore patrols against enemy submarines was being strengthened.

Intensification of the campaign against the submersibles, which have taken a toll of more than 300 United Nations ships off the east coast and in the Caribbean, resulted in the subs mining waters along the eastern seaboard.

EPIC: Flying Tigers' Story Told as AVG's Join Air Corps

(By Associated Press)

CHUNGKING—The epic story of the Flying Tigers, thrilling tale of achievement by a handful of brave men against overwhelming odds, ended today with the dissolution of the American Volunteer Group.

Its sequel, with the promise of more and worse headaches for the Japanese, begins tomorrow when the daredevil corps joins wings with the regular United States Army air forces in China.

The final chapter in the unique story of the volunteer fliers, one of the most sensational of the whole year, was a document issued today which reviewed their accomplishments.

Only at the end did the official history hint of the Flying Tigers' sacrifices in offering their services in a far-off country against a powerful foe.

"Some of the Tigers," it said simply, "have wives and children in America and miss them quite a bit."

From the time the AVG first went into battle on Dec. 20, 1941—less than seven months ago—the announcement said its fliers shot down or burned on the ground 284 Japanese planes definitely, probably destroyed almost as many more and "was responsible for what is believed to be the demoralization of the Japanese air force in China."

This was the record of a group which never had more than 250 men, of whom only 15 were lost

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

With exceeding caution one observes that the latest reports from Cairo indicate easement of the Allied position in the bloody battle for Egypt as the result of a sudden seizing of the initiative by the British in a fierce counter-attack against the Axis flanks.

This action is said to have thrown back Nazi Field Marshal Rommel's main assault against the british position at El Alamein with severe losses, and to have forced him to fall back to the west. The imperial positions were left holding firmly.

This is encouraging in that it shows the British finally have acquired the reinforcements necessary for a counter stroke. It is even more encouraging to see that the Allied commander, General Sir Claude Auchinleck, was on his toes and ready to seize the opportunity. However, we must remember that the battle isn't yet finished, that Rommel is one of the most resourceful leaders of our time, and that our danger is still terribly grave.

This counter-attack, which developed even as the conflict was swirling madly through the burning desert sands, was a brilliant tactical move by the canny Scotsman in whose hands the fate of Egypt rests. It was one of those fast-thinking actions for which Rommel himself has become famous.

What happened apparently was this, to judge from very incomplete accounts thus far received: the battle front lay roughly north and south, between El Alamein on the coast and the great qattara depression, some 35 miles down in the desert. The British line was anchored at El Alamein.

Rommel decided to make his main attack on the British concentration in the neighborhood of El Alamein, with the idea of crushing the defenders in a swift frontal thrust and opening a direct route to the great naval base of Alexandria some 65 miles further east.

The British suddenly found the pressure eased on their left flank near the qattara depression. Auchinleck, on the lookout for just such a chance, flung a counter-attack against the enemy flank and started to roll the Axis forces back. At the same time he made another counter-stroke against Rommel's northern wing, and this, too, met success. With both his flanks rolling back there was nothing for Rommel to do but pull his army out of the trap which was developing.

Obviously this is only a phase of the conflict and the battle may have been resumed in full force again even as this is being written. One thing is clear—it is a fight to a finish between Rommel the Nazi and Auchinleck the Scot. There will be no half-way business. Either the Allies or the Axis will take a murderous beating.

FOOD PROGRAM FACES TROUBLE IN HOUSE STALL

Congress Recesses Without Acting on Appropriation For Agriculture.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—War food production programs faced a disruption today as congress went into a recess until Monday without acting on the agriculture department's $680,000,000 appropriation bill.

The department, which has instituted plans for record production of food for the military and domestic needs of the United Nations, has been without funds since Wednesday, when the new fiscal year started.

Senator Russell (D.-Ga.), floor manager of the annual departmental supply bill, told colleagues it was his belief that failure of congress to resolve differences on the measure would "simply tie up all the department's activities" until an appropriation measure is passed.

The department continued to function in a nominal way, but officials made no commitments. Budget officials were in a quandary. They were particularly perturbed about a payday for 80,000-odd employes coming up on July 8. They said unless funds were voted by July 6, checks could be made out only for the last week of June.

The house attempted vainly yesterday to provide funds. It passed a new appropriation bill carrying items on which both houses were in agreement, and granting money for a two-month period for agencies involved in disputes. A third bill was to be submitted later when an agreement was reached on the points of difference.

The senate balked at this measure when Russell pointed out that it carried a provision which the senate had twice rejected before—a ban on sales of government-owned crops at below parity prices.

Asserting that senate conferees had agreed to a simple resolution making funds available to the department on a temporary basis, Russell angrily told the senate that the house action was "almost contemptible" and "unfair" to the senate.

Just what action congress might take next week to end the deadlock was a subject of varied speculation.

HANGING OF PAIR PROBED

Murder Possibility Studied After Bodies of Soldier and Woman Are Found.

(By United Press)

FORT WORTH, Tex. — The hanging in a city park of a Camp Bowie, Tex., soldier from Springfield, Mass., and an unidentified woman, presumably his wife, will be investigated by both civil and military authorities to determine whether they were murdered, police said today.

The bodies of the couple were found late yesterday in a densely wooded section of Trinity park. They had been hanged with pieces of cotton window sash cord, which had been purchased in a local store. The fact that a sales slip for the cord was found on one of the bodies prompted the theory it was a case of murder and suicide, officers said.

The soldier was Donald J. Belden, who had been missing from his camp since June 25. The woman lived at the guest house at the camp for several days, registering as his wife. When he got a short leave they came here together and registered at a hotel.

A preliminary examination indicated that the couple had been dead for about five days. The bodies were decomposed. The cords had snapped and the bodies were on the ground when a passer-by discovered them.

DECIDE TONIGHT ON FAIR'S FATE

Directors to Convene at Courthouse; Lively Discussion Looms.

The fate of Richland county's 1942 fair, scheduled for Aug. 25-28, will be decided at a meeting of the county fair board at 8:30 p. m. today in the probate courtroom at the courthouse.

The session, called by Chairman C. C. Hout of the board, is expected to produce a lively discussion as members of the county agricultural society, sponsor of the fair, are known to differ in their views of whether the fair should be held this year.

A few boards have called off their fairs, but many of them have decided to go ahead with this year's fair.

3,000 OHIO LEGIONNAIRES SET FOR EMERGENCY POLICE DUTY

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Three thousand American Legionnaires—all especially trained by the state highway patrol—stand ready to serve as auxiliary police in any Ohio emergency requiring help for regular law enforcement agencies.

"They have had military training and know how to take orders," Col. Lynn Black, patrol superintendent, reported. "I believe they will be cool headed when the occasion arises."

Legionnaire auxiliary police already have proved their worth.

After a giant wave drowned eight persons in Lake Erie early in June, 31 auxiliaries in Lake county were called at 3:15 a. m. and 28 of them reported for duty within 45 minutes. Their work in recovering bodies was praised highly by Black.

Patrolmen directed by Lieut. U. C. Felty of the patrol conducted 105 fifteen-week schools and did not "flunk" a single candidate for a certificate because of irregular attendance at the 35 hours of classes.

"Auxiliary police must be able to serve at any time, have a desire to serve their communities without pay and be in physical condition to work," Colonel Black said. "Many of these men are too old for active service in the armed forces, so they feel this is a chance to do something worthwhile for the war effort."

Although the auxiliary police have no police powers and are not armed, they help regular officers direct traffic during blackouts. Many have taken an additional 10-hour first aid course leading to Red Cross certificates for those who pass the test.

Three new schools are getting under way at Findlay, Marion and Lima. Two hundred American Legion members will be graduated from a course in Cuyahoga county July 10 and 200 more have signed up for the next class there if it is started.

Chesebrough of Toledo, teacher in the deaf school, and Miss Helen C. Haskins, Athens, an elementary teacher.

The board granted indeterminate leaves to Robert E. Glass and Dan B. Haber, John Simpson junior high school instructors, both of whom expect to go into the army soon.

REVEALS 1,250 CZECHS KILLED

New 'Protector' Ends 'Emergency' In Czechoslovakia.

LONDON—(U.P.)—Kurt Daluege, the new "protector" of Bohemia and Moravia, ended the German-proclaimed state of emergency in Czechoslovakia today and announced that 1,250 Czechs had been slain in reprisal for the assassination of his predecessor, Reinhard Heydrich.

Daluege said, however, according to radio Prague, that courts martial would continue in session to deal with patriots suspected of complicity in Heydrich's death.

The announcement said 141 more Czechs had been executed at Prague and Brun, bringing the total to 1,250, exclusive of those killed at Lidice and Leraky the Czech villages obliterated by the Nazis.

The wording on official police reports can be misleading at times. A report made out yesterday on a burglary of the grocery store of George Wolfe at 284 Cline avenue seemingly implicated two of the city's detectives in the burglary. The first part of the report stated that the detectives had been dispatched to the grocery store to investigate the case. Later, one of the department wags added "after the detectives left the store, Mr. Wolfe discovered that two cigaret lighters had been stolen."

If you have a good pair of binoculars (Carl Zeiss or Bausch & Lomb instruments, sizes 6x30 or 7x50) you can put them to work on one of Uncle Sam's ships at sea. This reminder came today from the Navy, which announced that since its first appeal four months ago, 1,654 such binoculars have been turned in. The owner of such an instrument should send it to the Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C. The owner's name is engraved on it and it will be returned if still in use after the war. Since the Navy cannot accept gifts of loans, $1 is sent to each donor. To date Ohio is eighth among states on the number of binoculars turned in, with 54.

GUIDES GO TO DRAFT BOARDS IN MID-JULY

Employment Service, Army, Navy Check Essential War, Civilian Occupations.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — War manpower sources said today that rosters of essential civilian activities and critical war "occupations" would be published about July 15 to establish a definite guide for military deferment.

The United States employment service is preparing the lists in collaboration with the war production board, the war, navy and agriculture departments, and with other government agencies, as a part of the general program to keep men with critical skills at work.

Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt directed copies of the lists sent to all local draft boards, and "to the extent required for the maintenance of essential activities, individuals who are engaged in essential occupations in essential activities" will be deferred from military service.

This does not mean, however, that every man of draft age working in one of the occupations listed will be automatically deferred, since the selective service act definitely prohibits "group" deferments.

Each man in such essential classifications, or his employer, must establish to the local board that his skill or service is necessary to the war effort according to the definitions of the manpower commission.

McNutt gave these definitions:

"Essential war activities include the production, repair, transportation or maintenance of equipment, supplies, facilities or materials required in the prosecution of the war by the United States and by the other United Nations.

"An essential occupation means any occupation, craft, trade, skill or profession, required in an essential activity, in which an untrained individual is unable to attain reasonable proficiency within less than six months of training or experience.

"A critical war occupation means an essential occupation, found by the United States employment service to be one with respect to which the number of individuals, available and qualified to perform services therein, is insufficient for existing or anticipated requirements for essential activities."

The war production board by McNutt's direction also is classifying war plants according to urgency, and the employment service will "make preferential referrals of workers to employers engaged in war production in the order of their priority before making referals to other employers."

Navy's Mightiest Dive Bomber O. K., Ohio Test Shows

COLUMBUS — (AP) — The first production model of the navy's mightiest dive bomber made an "uneventful and quite satisfactory" initial flight yesterday.

The craft—the latest model "Helldiver"—soared over Port Columbus with Chief Test Pilot "Red" Hulse at the controls. Cheering workers of the Curtiss-Wright warplane plant looked on.

The two-place, mid-wing monoplane with retractable landing gear was described by plant officials as capable of "carrying a bigger bomb load faster and farther than any dive bomber now in action in the war." It is designed to operate from land bases and aircraft carriers.

After Hulse returned from an "uneventful and quite satisfactory" flight, J. A. Williams, general manager of the Columbus factory, urged the workers to help build up "production of dive bombers and scout observation planes just as rapidly as is physically possible."

CITY'S BUDGET HIKED $47,000 BY COMMITTEE

warned the finance committee that it must expect cuts of more than 50 per cent in the share of state funds because of the war, $50,000 was added to the street fund.

Auditor Kelley told Porch and other committee members that the reduction of traffic on state highways since the entry of the U. S. into the war would strike a heavy blow at gas tax and registration receipts.

Porch said that $10,000 was added to the original estimate of $3,500 for the storm sewer fund because council always appropriated "a good deal more than that" in the course of a year's business.

"We might just as well face the facts and make allowances for these things in our budget," said Porch.

For the same reason, Porch said he suggested an increase of $1,000 in the city's fund for the payment of damages. He stated that council is usually requested to pay many more claims than the original request for $500 would pay.

The request of $67,740 for the operation of the police department was cut $8,090. Included in this cut was $6,440 which was intended for the addition of another patrolman and salary increases of $125 for members of the department during 1943.

The finance committee also halved a police request for $4,500 for the purchase of four new cruisers in 1943. Stating that three new cruisers would be purchased this year, the committee decided that only two new cruisers would be needed next year and earmarked $2,250 for their purchase.

The relief fund was given a $4,800 chop, the committee removed $5,000 from the original request for $15,000 for direct relief but added $200 for the care of indigents by the Visiting Nurses association.

A cut of $3,100 was made in the request for the operation of the city parks. The original request of $28,000 was sliced to $24,900 which is $4,300 more than the parks received for 1942.

Another $1,000 was added to the $11,500 asked for maintenance of the city building after Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff pointed out the need for overhauling the building's electrical wiring system.

The heaviest cut made by the finance committee was in the request of the fire pension board, which is not included within the general fund but receives its money from the same tax source.

The fire pension board's request for $27,249 which was $15,000 more than it received for 1942, was chopped back to the 1942 figure. The police pension fund request was cut from $13,150 to $12,060.

Mayor W. J. Locke told the finance committee that the tentative budget presented for their examination contained the requests of the various departments and that no cuts had been made in placing them in the budget form.

Several departments received small increases but these were for the most part the direct result of legislation passed by city council. In most cases, the increases were made to pay salary increases granted by council early this year.

The finance chairman admitted that the budget had "not been cut to the bone" because the committee believed it would be dangerous to ask for the minimum needed for operations.

Meanwhile, in a United Press dispatch from Chicago, Carl Chatters, executive director of the Municipal Finance Officers association was quoted as criticizing cities failing to "tighten their belts" in view of war conditions.

Likely to become one of the most serious factors in local taxation problems during the war, according to Chatters, will be growing inability of individuals to pay local taxes in the face of heavy demands made by the federal government.

"Among other things," said Chatters, "cities will lose revenue through lower assessments on inventories of small enterprises unable to replenish their stocks and a declining value on properties related to automobile usage."

Chatters also warned that local revenue may experience further declines in view of the possibility that some cities may grant moratoriums on taxes due from men serving in the armed forces. Moreover, if the Cochrane-Doughton bill passes congress, assessments on personal property used for defense will be eliminated.

To aggravate the problems of wartime municipal finance, cities, like people are higher prices for almost everything they buy. City budgets do not consider the rising costs of operation they would have to bear in an expanding war economy, according to Chatters.

PRICE CONTROL BATTLE FLARES

Henderson-Congress Struggle Over Funds Reveals Deeper Conflict.

office of price administration bureaucracy might encroach on their own political preserves back home, especially in the selection of state and regional directors. Henderson wants 88,000 employes and congress is disposed to give him only 50,000.

There is bitter congressional protest against the 2½ cents increase in gasoline prices in the eastern rationed area, the contention being that all parts of the country should help pay the freight for bringing expensive tank car gasoline into this area.

Farmers and wage earners have their usual large and active blocs of congressional supporters, too. And one of the immediate problems seems to be that neither farmers nor wage earners are willing to surrender certain advantages they have under the existing anti-inflation program.

Like war industries throughout the nation, Mansfield industrial plants busy with production of war goods will operate on the holiday. Westinghouse and Ohio Brass announced that work will go on as usual on all essential war materials, and Empire Sheet and Tin Plate announced that its steel-producing plant will operate as usual although its finishing plant will be closed.

All public parks and golf courses are expected to be jammed over the two-day holiday. If the weather continues to be anything like that today, it is anticipated that swimming pools and other places of amusement will have record crowds. The weather prediction, however, was for thundershowers tonight or early tomorrow.

Unlike the 54,000,000 residents of the 17 gasoline-starved Atlantic coast states, Mansfielders and others in this area will use their cars to some extent. Most trips planned for the holiday, however, are for reasonably short distances, such as to picnic grounds in this section, to Lake Erie resorts, and to Charles Mill and Pleasant Hill dams.

From Washington came an appeal by Joseph B. Eastman, defense transportation director, for everyone to dispense with needless travel as "a patriotic way to observe the Fourth." He cited not only the rubber shortage but the heavy traffic burdens imposed on railroads and bus lines by war-time conditions.

Supt. Lynn Black of the state highway patrol issued orders to all state patrolmen to be on the alert against unsafe driving. Black urged Ohio motorists to drive with extreme caution over the Independence Day week-end.

The Mansfield postoffice will observe regular Saturday schedules on the holiday. There will be one city delivery of mail, and all windows will remain open until noon.

The Senior high school band will play and the Boy Scouts will conduct the flag-raising ceremony at the fairgrounds program opening at 3 p. m. The afternoon program will include sports events, stunts, and contests. At 4:15 there will be a parade of decorated bicycles, with three $5 prizes to be awarded.

Principal speaker at the evening session will be Major J. T. Lovett of the office of the chief of staff at Fort Hayes, whose address on civilian defense is set for 7:45 p. m.

In the event of inclement weather, the program will be conducted at the fairground on Monday evening, starting at 7:15 p. m., Wyllie announced.

Convicted for Treason

First person convicted of treason in the United States since 1791, Max Stephan, 49, German-born restaurant owner, has been found guilty in Detroit federal court on 11 counts of aiding Oberluetenant Hans Peter Krug, Nazi flier, in the latter's flight from a Canadian prison camp. Stephan, who faces a possible death sentence, is shown right above, as a deputy marshal placed handcuffs on him following return of the verdict. At the left, hiding her face, is Stephan's wife.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1942.

Organizations dedicated to the task of keeping this country out of war are being disbanded for the duration.

Congress has a ways and means committee—with congressmen deciding on the ways and taxpayers providing the means.

"Victory is Sweeter Than Sugar," proclaimed a sign in the window of a grocery store in a neighboring town, and it is related that a woman customer decided she'd try a couple of pounds of it.

Price Ceilings Must Consider Costs

EXPERIENCE is now bearing out the prediction that "ceiling prices" which leave no reasonable margin of profit between production costs and retail prices of commodities cannot be maintained.

Price Administrator Henderson has reluctantly admitted that a raise of as much as 15 per cent must be permitted in selling prices of the 1942 pack of canned and dried fruits, because of price concessions on farm products and the absence of a ceiling on wages.

This appears to be only the beginning of an upward trend in prices, unless steps are taken by congress to stabilize farm prices and industrial wages, as is recommended by Harold D. Smith, budget director and one of President Roosevelt's closest advisers.

The "little steel" wage case, now before the war labor board, is another of the difficult situations confronted in the national effort to avoid runaway inflation. Demand for $1 a day wage increase is being made by 157,000 employes of four steel companies, on the grounds that advance in living costs justifies the increase and that the companies are able to pay it.

It was said by President Roosevelt on April 27, in an outline of seven points necessary to stop the movement toward inflation: "To keep the cost of living from spiraling upward we must stabilize the remuneration received by individuals for their work."

It appears, from investigation made by a three-man panel of the war labor board, that steel workers get more than the average earned in all industries, which will naturally raise the question of general wage increases, in the event the war labor board sanctions this $1 a day boost. It is unlikely that the other 450,000 workers in the steel industry would be satisfied to let the increase apply only to employes in the "little steel" group.

Nor should it be forgotten that the government is by far the largest patron of steel companies during this war period, and that it is by added taxes that these mounting costs must be met.

There can be no effective holding down of prices until all elements contributing to costs have been reasonably restricted—including farm prices and industrial wages.

Some Haven't Paid Auto 'Use Tax'

AS MIGHT be expected, a large majority of Mansfield motorists have complied with the requirement to pay a five-dollar "use tax" on their cars, for the year starting July 1.

But there's a guess that several hundred local people are driving cars on which there is no stamp to evidence payment of this tax.

Some of these may be merely neglectful, or ignorant, but others may be influenced by past failure to check up on violators who did not pay the tax covering the February to July 1 period.

In view of the careless handling that resulted in the first set of stamps being issued with the glue on the wrong side, it is unlikely that anyone in authority has yet thought of the simpler and surer way of collecting this tax each year by adding it to the state license fee and making collection from motorists at the same time license plates are issued.

Possession of license plates would thus evidence payment of the "use tax," so there would be no requirement for a special stamp, and the bookkeeping in connection with states turning over this tax to the federal government would be a minor item, as compared to the present cumbersome and ineffectual distribution system.

As this special tax is recognized as an emergency measure it is unlikely that license-issuing authorities in any state would object to taking on this added responsibility.

Working Hours for Mothers

WILLIAM A. STINCHCOMB, civilian defense director for Cuyahoga county, makes three requests of the management of Cleveland war industries.

First, he urges that mothers working in factories be given day-shifts. Best interests of both mother and child demand they be together at night.

Next, he asks that all local labor resources be exhausted before workers are taken in from other communities. Mr. Stinchcomb does not want to see slums develop from overcrowding, as happened during and after the last war.

The third request is that four-hour shifts be arranged for women.

> "Production of armament must go on at an accelerated tempo. If local women can help in this, rather than move more families into the district, we improve the economic strength of a local family and we should, in so doing, diminish the relief load during the adjustment period following the war. We lessen a difficult housing situation, and the chances are we permit families to stay on farms and produce food needed in the war."

Mr. Stinchcomb has long been known for his application of common sense to public problems. This is another keen and reasonable utterance.

Not the least of the recommendations is that for the four-hour shift for women. This idea may well spread throughout the country. Many thousands of women could safely work four hours a day without injury to home life. Some of these cannot give eight hours. Others do give it at the cost of proper care of homes and families.

An expert says the size of the national debt is immaterial, as long as no attempt is made to redeem it—which is remindful of the bankrupt who lists liabilities at a million and "assets, none."

Now it is chicle that is becoming so difficult to get that chewing gum manufacturers are experimenting with a synthetic substitute—but why not gather up used chewing gum for reprocessing?

Argentina is belatedly discovering that "You Can't Do Business With Hitler."

There's too much oil now on those troubled Caribbean waters.

THAT INCOMPLETE DEFENSE

Communism and Nazism Not Alike

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

JOSEPH E. DAVIES, publishing a series of his reminiscences as United States ambassador in Russia just as the present war was getting under way, included, in one of his recent articles, a paragraph that would be good for a volume, of our ex-diplomatic dope, had he seen fit to amplify it that much.

There's plenty of comment to the effect that we're pretty inconsistent in winking at Russian Communism, while balking so strenuously against Nazism, which generally is regarded as amounting to about the same thing, under a different name.

The fact is that our philosophies are as far apart as the two poles.

This doesn't mean that a worshiper of one sort of a carved idol is essential in a separate classification from the worshiper of a different idol. Nevertheless, one idol's precepts may be friendly to you, whereas the other's isn't.

Now, Nazism is politically dictatorial in principle. It's too much so.

Instead of being dictatorial, the Russian liberals (or radicals) back in czarist days, opposed any government whatever. Their contention was that government merely gummed things up. Their aim was to abolish it.

Perhaps they were more cuckoo than the totalitarians, but you can't class 'em as just alike. They're as different as plus and minus, obviously.

Off on Wrong Foot.

Okay, the Russians made their start first. They intended to be Anarchists, but a bunch of misguided birds pulled the program in a wrong direction. In part, they doubtless were nutty theorists. To an extent I suppose they were crooks. Anyway, they got off on the wrong foot.

Then along came Mussolini, whose Fascism mightn't have been so bad if it hadn't become complicated pretty soon.

Finally we have Hitler's Nazism—the main thing.

The rest of it's phooey.

Russia's brand is ethereal.

Italy's is incompetent. Herr Hitler has goods to deliver—in his own interest.

The best guess is that Comrade Stalin is honest—a bit whacky, perhaps, but well intentioned.

Benito is a prune.

Spain has a would-be dictator in Caudillo Franco, but he's only an adjunct.

Japan's miscellaneous.

It all concentrates on Adolf.

Why?

Joe Davies tells it in his paragraph.

"The difference," he says, "between the two (Communism and Nazi-ism) is clear. Christian religion can't be imposed upon the Nazi philosophy. Nazi-ism is a religion in itself."

Now, Anarchy is no such thing.

It's been interpreted as implying the chucking of dynamite bombs, but that isn't its creed. You can be an Anarchist and a Christian, too. Indeed, that's what an Anarchist insists that he emphatically IS.

Anarchy is what, by implication, ex-Ambassador Davies defends.

It's time somebody took the matter in hand. It needs to be defined.

Let's Define It.

Alongside of ex-Ambassador Davies' publication comes out a report by Congressman Martin Dies' committee on the subject of Nazi-ism in the United States. It assumes that this trend is totalitarian entirely — principally Communistic, but more that than anything else.

It isn't principally so, of course.

The Communistic part of it is bugs, naturally, but it's no crazier than any other part of it.

Communism's ideal (meaning Anarchy's ideal), according to Joe Davies, is "brotherly love." That isn't much like what Nazi-ism's ideal seems to be.

The fact is that Joe Davies knows what he's talking about.

He knows the difference between several of these different philosophies.

Congressman Dies doesn't know 'em apart. Make your own selection.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Monday, July 3, 1922.

Party of eastern motorists bound for California passed through Mansfield and reported that roads were "in poor condition."

Addition to Wagner Hardware company building, North Diamond street, was nearing completion.

Centennial celebration started at Marion, with President and Mrs. Harding as special guests.

Mrs. John Warden, 55, died at her home, 41 Flint street.

Red Cross Y. W. C. A. camp opened at Flemings Falls with forty girls registered.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Casperson, newly-weds, began housekeeping at 44 Small avenue.

Miss Luella J. Frye and John C. Stromberger were married by Rev. H. C. Roehner.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Fortune favored the cause of the little American army stranded in the hills above Santiago, Cuba, on July 3, 1898. For on this day began the battle which ended in the complete destruction of the enemy's fleet. Over 500 Spanish officers and men were killed or wounded and 1,700 taken prisoners while American losses were one man killed and one seriously wounded while $10,000 more than repaired the entire damage caused to the fleet by Spanish guns. Santiago then lay at the mercy of American guns.

Man About Manhattan

Dimout and Sunrise

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The Cagneys, being Irish, are seldom moody, and by far the most exuberant of the lot—even more so than the irrepressible Jimmy, is Jim's kid sister Jeanne.

Now Jeanne had a home-coming when "Yankee Doodle Dandy" opened in the New York that meant more to her than you could understand. To begin with — it wasn't her picture; it was Jim's, and in it she only played the part of Jim's kid sister, which she is in real life; though on the screen, since Jim was essaying the impersonation of George M. Cohan, she was really Cohan's kid sister.

But it was the first time she had ever seen New York in dim-out. And she is a New York kid, as all the Cagneys are New York kids. There's Jim himself, a New York kid. Then there's his brother Bill, who produced the picture and there are his two other brothers, Harry and Ed, who are doctors and who are also New York kids, though one peddles his pills in New York and the other in California.

JIM at the moment is kicking around Martha's Vineyard, but Jeanne—they call her Jeaney—is having a cinderella interlude in the big city before she goes on back across the Mississippi and the Painted Desert and the High Sierras to California.

What about her personally? Well, she is a brunette, and I'd say about 20 or 21. She's a graduate of Hunter College, where she was a Phi Beta Kappa. She had a couple of small parts in a couple of unimportant films before she became George M. Cohan's kid sister on the screen.

Then they came to New York for that opening. Occasions like this can make a plain girl pretty and a pretty girl radiant. And you never have to look beyond the sparkle of the eyes to tell how things are going. Too, the Irish are emotional. After the opening there were many friends to crowd around and indulge in nostalgic yesterdays. And Jim became so happy he busted out crying. Later, there was a party, and after that Jeanne went back to her hotel "To sleep the clock around because I'm so tired."

THAT was about three o'clock in the morning . . . but around a quarter of five she opened one eye—just a wink—and saw a strange red glow peeping over the windowsill.

Only fires make a glow like that, and Jeanne leaped out of bed and ran to the window.

But, it wasn't a fire. It was the sun trying to come up through the pale coral mists that arose over the city.

Jimmy Cagney's kid sister grabbed a quilt off the bed and wrapped it around her shoulders and sat on the fire escapes for half an hour and watched the sunrise over Manhattan. It was, she said, so unutterably lovely it made her want to weep.

Timely Editorial

State Aids Housewives.

Packages of sugar which weighed only 14 to 14½ ounces were offered for sale by one Ohio grocer as full pounds. This intended fraud upon consumers was discovered by a state deputy inspector of weights and measures who compelled the dealer to repackage the sugar with full 16 ounces in each sack.

Representatives of the "measures" division of the Ohio department of agriculture travel throughout the state inspecting not only scales, but packaged food of all kinds to determine accuracy of labels and weights.

Food dealers in great majority are honest. The systematic work of local and state inspectors tends to force honesty upon the few who might otherwise cheat a little for illegitimate profit.

Inflation or price ceiling lifting by skimped quality or short weight is unpatriotic as well as illegal. Those guilty of such practices should be apprehended and punished severely.—Toledo Blade.

Senate Chief Offender In Voting Funds for Other Than War Needs

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—The senate is by far the worse offender of the two branches of congress in refusing to curtail governmental expenditures not connected with the war, according to a report made by the Citizens' Emergency committee of Washington.

One of the highlights is that in considering the appropriation bill for the department of the interior the senate made 234 amendments involving the appropriation of money out of the treasury. Exactly 232 of these amendments, the committee points out, INCREASED appropriations over the house figures. Only two represented reductions.

In all six departmental appropriation measures acted on up to early this month, the senate boosted the totals. This was done despite the valiant efforts of certain Democratic senators, led by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, to enforce economy. The aggregate increase in appropriations, through inclusion of new items and increases for existing items, amount to $292,428,623.

More than a quarter of a billion dollars added by the senate to what the house of representatives thought ample! Not startling contrasted with appropriations for airplanes, tanks, guns, ammunition, ships, and the supply and pay of the men in the armed forces, but remember that these appropriations here considered have nothing to do with the prosecution of the war. Bear in mind that no one has dared accuse the house of representatives of failing to vote a single penny asked for war purposes. And these increases, amounting to nearly three hundred million dollars, were ADDED to the house figures.

NOW actually, while the committee lays the burden of blame, and quite properly so, on the senate, the house is far from being blameless. It is about as economical as a wife on a shopping binge after hearing that her husband had a fat pay raise!

It is only by contrast with the senate that the house shines. Actually the economy group, more vocal in the senate though less potent in influencing roll calls, regards the house performance as little short of a spending orgy—and this, keep remembering—on spending which has nothing to do with the war effort.

A great many voters obtained an entirely wrong impression from the agreement of both house and senate to eliminate the CCC. There had been so much favorable comment on the training camps for young men—in fact some said it was the best thing the New Deal had done—that headlines announcing its abolition struck many taxpayers as indicating a real economy move on the part of congress.

Not exactly. The death knell of the CCC appropriation was sounded by a flood of mail from indignant farmers. It was bad enough, the farmers wrote their congressmen, to have Jim, and George and Joe drafted, while Harry and Bud enlisted in the navy. But on top of that for the government to take George and Bill in the CCC camps, who in the dickens was going to work the farm? Didn't we need some food for the soldiers? Not to mention our Allies and our own civilians?

SO ALL is not gold that glitters. The forty-niners used to have a harsher expression — "Fool's gold."

And still the terrific waste of government publicity.

"This committee finds," says the report, "that 'news releases' sent by the federal government, at your expense, to a large newspaper in a single week totals 2,039 pages, equivalent to 163¾ pounds of paper, or 875 columns."

They Asked to Die

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

YOU SNEERED at them when they stood behind the bars.

Called them "jail birds," said they'd sacrificed their place as decent citizens. You laughed at those who pleaded for another chance.

But now they're dying under the stars . . . the selfsame flesh and spirit which you cast aside.

Now they are giving what is left of life to save your homes, your businesses, your land.

I WONDER HOW YOU FEEL.

What am I talking about? I'm talking about the men who have gone out from our prisons to give their lives for America.

They offended America once. They're defending her now. Have you the nobility to recognize and salute that defense?

From San Quentin alone 150 have gone on parole—are serving in America's armed forces from Ireland to Australia. Yes, they were convicts. But they were young men too . . . filled with the love of life . . . dreaming as we all do at times . . . stirred by sudden urgencies and rebellions.

No, I'm not weeping over them. I'm no sob sister. I'm not saying that everyone within the gray walls is good, any more than everyone without those walls is respectable. We're a queer mixture, we humans.

There is darkness and there's light in all of us. And some of us get caught and branded and some of us don't. And there's many a man in prison who's a mad monster whom I wouldn't release any more than you would, but there's also many a man with the spark of God glowing within his sodden clay, "even as you and I." And for three years now I have been hearing the pleas of those men, forwarded by great-hearted wardens who knew human nature.

Every day they came, letters from every penitentiary in America. But on the day after Pearl Harbor they came as they have never come before, spilling over my desk, covering the floor. And there was one cry in all of them:

Elsie, try to get us a chance. We're not making excuses. We don't want pity even though some of us have had a pretty hard deal. We just want a chance to prove that we are American men—a chance to die as other men are dying. Yes, we know that many will sneer. They will think we'll run away. But they don't know that any hell on the battlefield is easier to take than the slow rotting we're enduring within these walls—doing nothing, meaning nothing.

Elsie, you alone of all columnists have dared to stand up for us though you must have taken many a beating. Now you are our only hope. Try to get the government to think of us as men, not just as animals. Give us our chance to die like men. We won't run away. After the shame we've gone through and the loneliness and the misery, perhaps we'll be the best fighters there are on the front. The others are afraid because they have had happy lives. They have something to lose. We have nothing to lose except this nightmare. Give us a chance!

And so many of them were given their chance and thousands more are drilling for that chance every day. And others have died for that chance, died gladly even though they were strangling, even though they were swimming in burning oil. They have served, those parolees, one every battle front. From San Quentin alone 90 men have joined the army; 25 more are waiting for their draft report. An additional 25 were ready for service but the draft board doctors turned them down because prison life had wrecked their bodies. And, to the everlasting glory of the various United States wardens and the government itself, these men from the prisons go out to fight or die, unbranded.

YOU SNEERED AT THEM WHEN THEY CROUCHED BEHIND THE BARS.

HOW DO YOU FEEL NOW THAT THEY DIE FOR YOU BENEATH THE STARS?

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Handled Without Gloves.

To be handled without gloves is to be spoken to bluntly, judged strictly, dealt with severely.

The expression, a pugilistic metaphor, is an allusion to the days preceding our effete era in which softies do their prize-fighting with six and even twelve ounce heavily padded mitts.

In those years boxing was what has been redundantly termed a he-man's vocation, its tools being ordinary, if not ornery, unvarnished bare knuckles, which were de rigeur.

From this quaint custom came the phrase, "to be handled without gloves," which means figuratively and sometimes literally, to be manhandled without mercy.

A Farmer's Diary

Wild Raspberries

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WILD RASPBERRIES, on the hill, are ripe. I saw the swollen sprays of red and black, adorn the varied rich greenery of the hedge. Rain has been so abundant that stalks and fruit are especially vigorous and clean.

I took a small pail, one early morning, and walked along the valley and wooded hills to old clearings and various places where I knew wild berries grew last year. I was not disappointed. About the same old stumps, in great arcs, wiry canes bent downward with burdens of ripened fruit.

I was the first comer to wade through tall blooming heads of timothy and spy this virgin treasure. Pail in hand, I stood some distance off and feasted on the beauty of the scene, so wild and untouched by human hands.

In the background were tender, winding stems of bittersweet, above the rotting stump. Some mittened and ordinary leaves of sassafras, late blooming honeysuckle, and elder blossoms. Large patches of white daisies spread along the grassy slope and banked, still whiter, by the low distant border of the field. A neighboring wheat field stood, deep, reddish yellow with slanting heads, ready for harvest. An eerie, restful odor was ever present upon the moist cool quiet morning air.

The berries, as I plucked them, seemed a part of the morning dew, the summer sun and copious showers. The bloom of the wild rose, the wild scent of the old fence row, the green fragrance of the woods belonged to them.

Sharp spines, beneath the leaves, raked my hands and wrists and clutched at my clothing. My smarting scratches brought to mind what Browning said, "Be our joys three parts pain."

Yesterday, at the agricultural experiment farm, I saw raspberries grow, in long straight rows, supported by wire cables upon posts. They were a beautiful sight, with berries big and luscious and colorful—cultured cousins of this humble, rugged plant that struggles to fruition in the fence corners. Yet winter blasts, heaving frosts, grazing herds and strong competition for a place in the sun, have not succeeded in harming the essential goodness of the wild fruit. I know, for beside the cool shady road I stopped to rest and ate a juicy handful from the top of my pail.

BRITISH FORCE ROMMEL DRIVE INTO REVERSE

Surprise Attack on Axis Flank Turns Tide of Battle In North Egypt.

mel's right flank in a surprise thrust and encircled the enemy.

It was not immediately clear whether this was merely a light harassing force to slash at Rommel's vital lines of communication or a full-scale encirclement maneuver. If the latter, it would appear that Gen. Auchinleck had out-foxed "the fox," drawing Rommel deep into the coastal bottleneck and then cutting off the escape route to the west.

Withdrawal of Rommel's heavy mechanized columns through the Quattara salt marshes would be virtually impossible.

While the 10-day old battle of Egypt turned sharply in Britain's favor, Adolf Hitler's grand offensive against Russia appeared to be taking shape as new battles erupted along the Soviet front.

Aside from the dying battle of Sevastopol the Germans were now attacking furiously in at least six sectors—Kursh, Belgorod, Volchansk, Kharkov, Moscow and Volkhov and Hitler's haigh command said Axis forces had broken through on a width of nearly 185 miles.

Red army headquarters said the Germans launched new drives yesterday around Volchansk and Belgorod, respectively 35 and 50 miles northeast of Kharkov, and announced:

"Stubborn battles commenced."

The new offensive apparently was aimed at a break-through toward Voronezh, key rail point, to cut the Moscow-Rostov railway linking Russia's central and southern armies.

On the Krusk front, 280 miles below Moscow, Red army counter-attacks were said to have recaptured three villages and a Soviet broadcast declared "the initiative is being wrested from the Germans" in the five-day-old Krusk offensive.

Dispatches to Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, said a vast tank battle was raging east of Kursk, with hundreds of machines on both sides, and declared the Germans were suffering tremendous losses.

Red Star said the battle, the greatest tank clash of the present offensive, started Wednesday morning when 200 German tanks attacked. These were hurled back, Red Star said, and then the real mass battle of steel-clad monsters began at noon that day.

In the Crimea, the Russians still ignored the German claim that Swastika battle flags were flying over Sevastopol, acknowledging only that the situation was critical and that the defenders of the Black Sea fortress were outnumbered 15 to 1.

London military quarters said isolated bands of Russians were still holding out in strong points in Sevastopol, but declared the Germans appeared to have captured the main sections of the city.

Meanwhile, Berlin dispatches cleared through neutral Switzerland indicated that the Germans expected to wreck the Red armies by September—a feat they boasted had been completed several times in 1941.

The dispatches intimated that the developing Nazi summer offensive would be an all-out smash to knock Russia out of the war and release troops in anticipation of a second Allied front.

In aerial warfare, RAF night bombers delivered another big-scale smash at Bremen, attacking the German U-boat base for the third time in a week.

At least 300 planes pounded the city, Germany's second greatest port, setting great fires amid the ruins left by earlier raids. Thirteen RAF bombers failed to return.

Axis 'Propagandizes' Egypt, Middle East

The German and Italian governments published a declaration today saying the sovereignty of Egypt would be respected and her independence insured. In other propaganda broadcasts they said Britons and Americans in the Middle East were terror stricken over the prospect of losing Egypt.

Radio Berlin and radio Rome joined in broadcasting assurances to the Middle East that they had not entered Egypt as an enemy force but only to drive the British from the territory and liberate the Middle East from British rule.

Two-Hour Cannonade Rocks Dover Strait

LONDON —(AP)— Ground-shaking cannonading, virtually all of it apparently from the English side, occurred along Dover strait from midnight last night until 2 a. m. today.

Residents along the southeast coast of Kent were roused by the thunder and scores left their beds to hasten to the sea front or cliff tops.

(Sporadic cannonading along the English channel in the past usually meant an attack on a convoy steaming through the channel, either by the British or German vessels or a German attack on British vessels.)

Government of India Reorganized

LONDON —(INS)— A drastic reorganization of the government of India, including the designation of a Moslem as minister of defense, was announced today at India House. Sir Firoz Kahn Noon, former Indian high commissioner in London, was named to the defense post.

Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, United Nations commander-in-chief in India, will retail direction of all matters pertaining to actual warfare, the announcement indicated. Two other Indians, Sir Ramiswami Mudaliar, a Hindu, and Maharaja Jam Saheb of Nawanager were named members of the war cabinet.

COUNTY BUDGET $11,000 BELOW 1942 EXPENSES

Requests Made To Conform With Anticipated Revenue, Auditor Says.

the decline in other tax revenues, the auditor predicted.

Major reduction in the budget request for 1943 is in the fund for general upkeep of the courthouse. It was slashed approximately $9,000 under the amount allocated for that purpose this year. The fund provides for repairs, insurance, equipment, fuel and light.

A reduction of $2,000 was made in the amount requested for maintaining county residents in state institutions, financing the county tuberculosis sanatorium, and contributions to the public employes' retirement fund.

The remaining $1,000 was slashed from the welfare fund which includes relief and the care of the blind and dependent children. Wolfe said the reduction was made in that fund in the expectation that direct relief demands will be less than during the first part of this year.

Requests for operating funds for county offices were not changed materially, Wolfe explaining that should some of the officials find later that they can get along with less than they received this year, the additional money could be shifted to another fund.

Allied Bombers Again Pound Jap Dilli Base

MELBOURNE —(INS)— For the second successive day Allied bombers pounded the Japanese base at Dilli, on Portuguese Timor, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today. The attack was directed at the airdome and radio station.

Dilli, located on the northern shore of the island, is approximately 400 miles northwest of Darwin, Australian north coast base. It is one of the most important enemy supply depots in this area.

This Japanese base was one of the six bombed in the previous series of raids reported in Thursday's communique. Other points attacked were Kendari on the southeast tip of Celebes, Salamaura and Lae on New Guinea, and Bougainville and Tulagi in the Solomon Islands.

CONGREGATION FETES RETIRING SHELBY PASTOR

Rev. Arthur Staples To Be Honored at Party Thursday.

SHELBY — A farewell party honoring Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Staples and family, who left here today for Canada to spend the summer, was held Thursday night at the First Methodist church.

Dr. Staples, who has been pastor of the First Methodist church here for four years, retired from the ministry last week after 45 years of service. His plans for the future are uncertain.

Dr. J. C. Searle, pastor of the United Brethren church; Rev. Michael A. McFadden, father of the Most Pure Heart of Mary Catholic church; and Leonard Waines, superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school, gave short talks.

The Staples were presented with gifts by the Good Fellowship class and Boy Scouts. The presentation was made by Supt. C. G. Keck of the Shelby school, member of the Methodist pulpit committee.

Following the program which also included musical numbers and readings, the congregation adjourned to the dining room where refreshments were served by members of the Methodist Youth Fellowship, sponsor of the farewell reception.

Rev. George Beebe of Barberton, who succeeds Dr. Staples, will deliver his first sermon Sunday morning. He will move here with his wife next week.

Army Agent Trails Espionage Plot to 'King of Belize'

which spotted a ship, identified as the La Plata, carrying oil drums to Belize.

When they learned she was to sail early in April for Cristobal, army counter-espionage authorities put an agent aboard and arrested several passengers, charging them with evading censorship regulations. On one person they found plans of vital installations at the naval air station at Coco Solo.

After the army intelligence agent, flying his own plane, visited Belize and obtained further information in letters from a night club hostess and laborers, Lieut. Gen. Andrews took up the trail himself.

He traveled extensively through the Central American republics, picking up a hint here and a clue there.

Meanwhile, the agent in Belize found his room ransacked one night. A bottle of liquor was found to contain poison. Efforts were made to sabotage his plane.

Army Plans to Form Anti-Sabotage Units

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The army planned to organize more than 200,000 private plant guards into anti-sabotage patrols today as arrangements were made under personal direction of President Roosevelt to bring the first eight Nazi saboteurs caught to trial before a military commission empowered to send them before a firing squad.

Meanwhile, Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the army service of supply, ordered civilian plant guards at the nation's 11,000 plants manufacturing war materials to be organized as an auxiliary to the regular army corps of military police. It was learned that the special guard may total at least 200,000 men, perhaps twice that number.

Military Trial Board Will Meet Soon

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — A seven-man military commission set up by President Roosevelt to try eight German saboteurs who landed in this country from submarines will convene within a few days to arrange for the first trial of its kind during this war.

The commission will formulate its own rules for the trial which President Roosevelt ordered to start July 8 "or as soon thereafter as practicable." The proceedings, expected to be highly secret, will be conducted at a place to be chosen by the commission.

Mr. Roosevelt will review the findings and recommendations of the commission. It was understood that the death penalty would be demanded for the eight Nazis by Attorney General Francis Biddle, who, with the judge advocate general of the army, will prosecute the case.

HOROSCOPE

FOR SATURDAY, JULY 4

High levels of public festivity and celebration, probably fanfare, enthusiasm and patriotism, are likely to make this national holiday one of unprecedented and unforgettable importance. There is likely to be lavish expenditures, excesses and self-indulgence in an abandoned spirit of gayety. It would be well to be on guard against intrigue, trickery and duplicity.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year in which public affairs seem to overshadow all other interests. Under an expansive and indulging mood there may be affiliations with groups, communities and political or fraternal bodies which may bring prominence and public acclaim. But in intimate contacts there is need for precaution against fraud, decepnon, illicit or undercover agreements or understanding. There may be surprising turns to events and in anxious spots elders may assist by wise counsel or aid.

A child born on this day should have much ingenuity, skill, enterprise and spirit of adventure, supported by sound technics and persistent efforts toward a useful and happy life.

Volunteering Of Teachers In Wartime

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

It was a wise move to have teachers register adults for rationing of sugar and gas. The public readily accepted their services, and the teachers have generously and conscientiously cooperated, many of them serving for long hours even after a hard day of teaching. This service affords a fine medium for public relations. Never in our history have so many school patrons come face to face with the teachers of their children.

Ever so many teachers are planning to give still wider volunteer services this summer. Some will enter Red Cross first aid courses, nutrition, home nursing or be instructors in them. Some will supervise high school girls and boys from towns and cities employed on farms. Some will give added time as leaders of Scouts, Campfire groups and 4-H Clubs.

Many teachers wil lvolunteer as leaders of children on public playgrounds, on vacant lots, even in backyards. Some nursery school, kindergarten and elementary teachers will serve in public day nurseries, public kindergartens, or improvised play schools during the coming summer.

Never was there a time in recent years when so many children of various ages will be home as during this summer. Parents and children need to learn to play all sorts of games together and to improvise home fun. Churches ought to put on more vigorous programs for youth on Sundays and have more recreational opportunities for these youths during week days.

Vacation Schools.

The vacation church schools which proved so valuable in peace times, can be still more useful to the tot and runabout this summer. Many teachers and some mothers and high school girls will be glad to volunteer to work for these schools. High school girls also might render a good service in their immediate neighborhood by attracting young children to their house, porch or lawn and reading to small groups of these children.

When we keep children and youths happily busy at safe, wholesome activities, we promote morale and help hasten the day of victory.

A selected list of books from which to read to the baby and young child may be had by writing me in care of this paper enclosing a self-addressed envelope, with a three-cent stamp on it.

Q. I am a working mother and leave my baby two years old with my mother. While I am away my youngster is exceptionally good but the minute I come home she whines. As a result, my evenings, Saturday and Sunday are miserable.

A. This child has discovered that by whining she can command your attention. Give her more time and affection when she is good. Hold and cuddle her now and then and read a great deal to her. Answer all her questions and show great interest in her small creations however crude. Write out a program and put it on the kitchen wall, allowing certain periods to be spent wholly with her and other periods when she cannot have your attention however much she whines. Hold yourself rigidly to this program. When her whining gets beyond your endurance assign her to sit doing nothing in a chair for exactly half an hour during which you will, of course, talk to her as if all is well, though she will have to serve the full time.

Formals Should Be Gay, Appealing

By SUSAN BARDEN
(International Illustrated News Writer.

Nowadays many girls are giving their time to provide recreation for soldiers and sailors in the form of dances, parties and special entertainment. To help the girls at their interesting job the Girls' Service Organization of the Y. W. C. A. has published some style tips that are sure to please service men.

Knowing that all of you are anxious to give the boys pleasant times and help build up their morole, we are passing along some of this information and showing the type dresses recommended.

The manual states that whether you get into an evening dress for one of your informal dances, or dress informally for a barn dance, the same careful selection should go into your clothes. It doesn't matter how much you spend, but it does matter how feminine you look.

The most appealing and glamorous clothes a girl can possibly wear are evening clothes. A long dress that suits your type does wonders for a man's morale. Here, again, it doesn't matter how much you spend, but it does matter what color you select. It should not only be a shade that becomes you, but it should be a color that will cheer the boys.

Avoid Uniform Colors.

The service men that you meet, talk and dance with are in uniform. They wear blue, gray or khaki day in and day out. So the wise girl will therefore not wear these unrelieved colors. A fresh flower and a bright handkerchief can brighten a costume immeasurably.

Unrelieved red is not a good color to wear, so combine it with green or white. Pink and blue are always good, and alone or combined, they are the most appealing colors. White is cool and fresh looking, but do add another color and make it a little more interesting. Steer clear of beige without contrasting accessories. It's too near khaki to be attractive alone.

The three evening dresses shown in the above photographs would meet the approval of even the most critical member of our armed forces, and would certainly make the wearer look and feel her very best.

Ann Baxter (right) is wearing a gay young frock of candy stripes in peppermint pink and white. The dress is a rayon taffeta, deliberately ingenue in style. The fitted bodice is edged at the round neckline with a wide ruffle, and the bouffant skirt is trimmed with a deep flounce. Three nosegays of bright field flowers—one in the skirt, one for the hair and the third caught in the bodice ruffle in the center back, give added charm to the costume.

Joan Fontiane, (left) models a long-sleeved frock made of white souffle with appliques of large flowers in fuchsia shades accenting the bodice and trailing down the side of the skirt.

The dance dress, (center) is made of white organdie in multiple tiers, scalloped in red, yellow and green and belted widely with green grosgrain ribbon. It was designed by Henri Bendel, and is very effective when doing a rhumba.

If Wrinkles Are Found Get Busy

By MME QUI VIVE

It is to be expected that troubles, worries and advancing years will bring facial creases, though that doesn't always happen; some women of spirit surmount all life's difficulties. But it is not expected that women who are scarcely out of their twenties will have accordion pleats in their pretty faces. If you are an early Thirty Girl and have discovered lines around your eyes, tiny furrows starting to burrow between your eyebrows, you'd better sit right down and ask yourself a few questions concerning your living habits. Wrinkles do not blot themselves out; they dig in deeper. Catch 'em young.

Are you underweight? Do you eat at regular hours, get the various food elements you need and enough of them to keep your energy motors going? Finicky eaters lose weight, often wrinkle before their time. Facial tissues, are then in a state of semi-starvation because the diet does not include enough fat.

Do you get enough sleep? Loss of sleep will map the face with little railroad tracks. You can't go full steam ahead all the time, gallop all day, play in the evening hours. Lots of girls and women do. Later on they wish they hadn't. One should make every effort to hang onto youthful bloom, it can't be done without due respect for the laws of health.

Local treatment is helpful. Creams and massage promote a smooth skin surface, but they must have a background of hygienic living. They won't build solid, healthy cells. The only way to do that is to supply the body with proper food, have a balance of work and relaxation, get eight hours sleep every night, enjoy sunlight and fresh air whenever you get a chance.

By subsisting on a balanced diet you will get all the vitamins and mineral salts you need. If you are run down, your doctor may prescribe some in capsule form. We doubt if any woman is qualified to know just what her vitamin needs may be. She solves the problem by eating meat, fish, poultry, fruits, vegetables, especially green salads. Also, by having one egg a day, drinking orange and tomato juice, getting a certain amount of starches and sweets that are necessary to create energy.

The crinkled skin must be petted and fondled. Every night apply a heavy cream to a clean skin surface. Start at the collar bones, sweep upward, being careful not to push the flesh up around the eyes.

Brisk tapping, slapping and hammering will prove more beneficial in the fight against lines than the usual rotary motion. Force as much of the cream into the flesh as you can.

Every morning use clear, cold water, dry, apply an astringent.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"But what are you going to do?" I protested. "You must be terribly tired, traveling all day. I had planned to have you sleep here in the bedroom."

"Leaving you to roost on that bed-couch in the living room, I suppose," he gibed.

"It's very comfortable," I said defensively, and he laughed down at me.

"I'm glad to hear that," he said, "for that's where I'm going to sleep tonight, as soon as I'm sure there's no chance of your waking. Where do you keep the blankets and sheets and things for that couch?"

"I'll get them," I said, starting to rise, but his firm grip held me fast.

"Don't excite the caveman in me by getting fresh," he threatened, "or I'm likely to turn one of your lovely crulean orbs to an ebon hue. I asked you where that bedding was and I expect an answer."

"Yes, my lord," I said with affected meekness. "It's in that closet over there on the lowest shelf."

Not To Be Disturbed.

"That's all I need to know. Now I'm going to march you into the bedroom and put you to bed, and leave orders that nobody shall call you in the morning until you awaken yourself."

Like most women who carry many responsibilities on their shoulders and generally "stand on their own feet," I revel in Dicky's occasional exercise of conjugal authority, backed always by solicitude for my health. I found it very sweet to be bossed around, and submitted meekly to Dicky's putting me into bed as if I were a small child.

I awakened late next morning to find my husband still acting the part of a martinet.

"It's time somebody rode herd on you," he said, "and who has a better right than your lawfully wedded spouse? I've had a session with Dad, and he tells me that for the next few days he's simply marking time, while he watches for developments from several psychological mines he has sown in suspected areas. So he agrees with me that you stay right here today and tonight. Tomorrow morning we are going over to the Underwoods to speed Lillian on her way, then we'll settle down there for a spell while Katherine nurses Harry back to strength.

"You are not to stir from this apartment until we break camp to go over to the Underwoods. Nobody's going to bother you here, and for once you'll have a quiet twenty-four hours. I'm going to be absent most of the time going over some things with Dad, but I'll be within call."

However, events proved Dicky more optimist than prophet. True, most of the day wore away without incident. I saw only Dicky and the room maid. Ronald, Mary, the Veritzens, even my father, did not so much as telephone me.

Call From Katherine.

But at nine o'clock in the evening, when I was thinking of meeting Katherine next day, my telephone rang and the apologetic voice of the hotel operator came to my ears.

"Mrs. Graham, your husband said no one was to call you, but there is a lady here who says that she must see you, and that you will see her if you know who she is. I didn't know what to do."

"What is her name?" I asked quickly.

"Katherine Bickett," came the surprising answer.

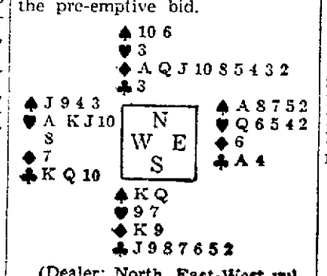
"The Authority on Authorities"

AGAINST A PRE-EMPT

Here's a pretty good little rule to use when trying to defeat a pre-emptive bid. Pick off one trick in each likely-looking suit, if you can, before trying to gain a second trick in any single suit. That idea is based on the study of several hundred pre-emptive bids found in the records of various tournaments.: It indicates that a singleton is the most likely holding, in any particular side suit, in the hand of the player who made the pre-emptive bid.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.

North	East	South	West
5 ♦	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	5 ♥	Pass	Pass
6 ♦	Dbl

There is a contract which was set a couple of tricks at most tables of a tournament. The soundest order of defense is to cash the club A first, because it is the least likely to be ruffed, being in the shortest suit; next the spade A because its holder knows the side has it, and finally to lead a heart to the K, whereupon the show is over. The correct return for West after that is the club K, as that suit is shorter, and therefore more likely to find North holding another card, than in the longer hearts.

One East defied that simple logic, however. After winning the first trick with the club A, he decided to lead the club 4, in the hope that the declarer had either the K or the Q in addition to the 3 which he put on the first trick. North at that table ruffed the second club, led the diamond 3 to the K, led a third club which was ruffed by the diamond A, went to the dummy then with the diamond 5 to 9, and ran clubs. On these he parked the two spades and the lone heart, leaving him only a bunch of good trumps, so that he made the unmakable contract.

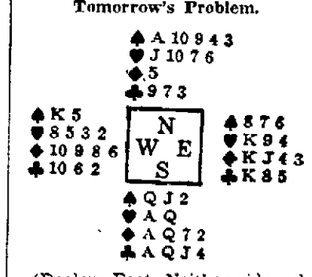
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

After the diamond 10 is led, how should South play this deal for 6-No Trumps, doubled by East?

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

I catch on slow, so it's taken me a long time to arrive at the conclusion that the long-suffering public has become a bit weary of reading how much work I have to do on a holiday, and that it might be more interested in reading what the public can do on the calendar's red-letter days.

S-o-o-o—in order that this guide to happy holidays might come in time to do the long-suffering public some good, I'm giving the L.S.P. a holiday column a day early. Tomorrow this space will be back on the "business as usual" basis.

For those fans who like to take their sports "sitting down," there's only one spectator attraction in the city tomorrow. That's at North Lake park where the state champion Mansfield Provident Loan softball girls attempt to stretch their present two-game "winning streak" in a double header with Cuyahoga Falls.

However, a short drive will take many of our citizens to the Ashland Fairground where the midget auto racers will stage their second holiday program of the season.

July the Fourth, July the Fourth,
East or West or South or North,
Everywhere you go you'll find it,
(If you've a baby, let the neighbors mind it.)
Fun's afoot, and that's no jive,
Don't get hurt, come back alive.

Golf takes front rank in Mansfield's participant sports for tomorrow, with all three courses offering special features for the club swingers.

Westbrook Country club, repeating its Memorial day program, will have two tournaments for its members, a handicap flag tourney in the morning, and a two-ball mixed foursome tourney, with blind bogey, in the afternoon.

Coolridge and Possum Run courses will have blind bogey tournaments for their patrons.

If anyone cares to stage a blind putting tourney, I will enter.

And of course the conservancy lakes in the Mansfield area will be dotted with boatmen and fishermen.

And the swimming pools will be swamped with energetic splashers if the day's as hot as Independence days customarily are.

That's the sports menu for the day, kids. Take your pick. And have a good time.

Record Set for War Contribution

CHICAGO—(INS)—A new American league mark for contribution to the war effort was recorded today as $33,352 was turned over to the Army and Navy Relief funds as a result of the benefit doubleheader last night in Comiskey park.

* * *

The highest previous contribution in the junior circuit was established May 23 when 12,216 persons paid in $13,221 to watch Philadelphia tackle Boston in Bean Town.

* * *

Despite the record gate receipts, the contest fell far short of equaling the National league high for money turned over to the war relief agencies in a single program. At Brooklyn on May 7, the Dodgers and Giants drew $59,859.

EIGHT CHAMPIONS DEFENDING TITLES

OCEAN CITY, N. J.—(U.P.)—Eight champions will defend their titles tomorrow in the women's National A. A. U. track and field meet at Municipal Recreation Center field.

Included in the list of title holders will be Jean Lane, Wilberforce sprinter; Stella Walsh, Cleveland Polish jumper; Alice Coachman, Tuskegee high jumper; Catherine Fellmeth, shot-putter; Angela Mica, St. Louis baseball hurler; Leila Perry, Tuskegee hurdler; Lucy Newell, Tuskegee, and Dorothy Dodson, Chicago, javelin champions.

Yanks and Sox Battle For First

Meet In Crucial Series at Boston Fenway Park.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

THE Fourth of July fireworks in the major leagues are slated to be set off at twilight tonight in Fenway park at Boston where the rocketing Red Sox and the sputtering New York Yankees will collide in the most important series of the midsummer.

A mere three games separate the clubs in the standings and the game at 6 p. m. (EWT) tonight and tomorrow's holiday doubleheader will give the Red Sox a chance to move into a tie for the American league lead.

Till yesterday Boston had at least a slender chance of taking over exclusive possession of first place on Independence day, traditionally the date for tabbing pennant winners, but weather kept both clubs idle.

It took none of the luster away from the Red Sox-Yankee series, however, and chiefly furnished a lull during which Manager Joe Cronin fined Slugger Ted Williams $250 and lectured him in front of the entire club for loafing.

The Sox have won 20 of their last 24 games and with Williams presumably chastened and ready to make his bat do his talking, they may add additional bruises to the already battered world champions, who have lost 11 of their last 17 games.

If New York is able to win the series, though, the champs may be hard to head. On this date a year ago they had precisely the same lead they now hold—three games—and won in a romp.

The Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers both took advantage of the idleness of New York and Boston yesterday to tighten the boundaries of the first division.

* * *

The Indians completed a sweep of their four-game series with the Chicago White Sox last night with a 7-5 triumph before 29,000 fans.

This lifted Cleveland within 6½ games of the lead.

Detroit, in fourth place, edged up to 8½ games by beating the St. Louis Browns, 5-4.

In the only game played in the National league the St. Louis Cardinals extended their winning streak to four games by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-1, on the five-hit hurling of John Beazley, who had a shutout till the ninth.

Gordon Still Retains Lead

But Yankee Slugger Slumps Seven Points.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Second-baseman Joe Gordon of the New York Yankees held the major league batting leadership for the third straight week, although his average slumped seven points, official figures revealed today.

Tabulations, including day games of Wednesday, gave Gordon .363, compared with .370 last week.

Pete Reiser of the National league Brooklyn Dodgers retained his slim hold on second place with a .348, only one percentage point better than third place Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox.

* * *

In the pitching circles, veteran Larry French of the Dodgers held the only unbeaten record of eight straight triumphs to lead both circuits. In the American league the Yankees' rookie hurler, Hank Borowy, dropped from a first place tie with French into second, with six victories against one setback.

Other leaders:

Doubles (N) Joost, Cincinnati, 22; (A) Higgins, Detroit, 27.

Triples (N) Slaughter, St. Louis, 7; (A) Spence, Washington, Heath, Cleveland, and DiMaggio, New York, 7.

Home runs (N) Mize, New York, 12; Williams, Boston, 17.

Stolen bases (N) Reiser, Brooklyn, and Miller, Boston, 10; (A) Case, Washington, and Kuhel, Chicago, 13.

RECORD GALLERY FOR TOURNEY EXPECTED

CHICAGO—(INS)—That the $15,000 Tam O'Shanter National Open and the All-American Amateur golf tournaments may draw the biggest crowds ever to attend an American golf event was foreshadowed today by the statement of George H. May, Tam O'Shanter president, that advance ticket sales already total 19,555.

Net proceeds from the tournaments, to be held on the Tam O'Shanter course from July 20 to 26, will be turned over to the army emergency relief fund.

200 MARKSMEN IN MT. GILEAD SHOOT

MOUNT GILEAD—(AP)—More than 200 small-bore marksmen from Ohio and surrounding states are expected to participate tomorrow and Sunday in the Ohio rifle championship matches at the State Association's nearby range.

The shoot is the year's largest to be held in this area, the annual matches at Camp Perry having been cancelled for the duration of the war.

Ohio Amateur Tourneys Set

War Bonds and Stamps Offered as Prizes.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Despite tire rationing and other problems posed by the war, Ohio's two major amateur golf championships will be staged as scheduled this month.

The Ohio amateur, sponsored by the Ohio Golf association, is set for July 13-18 at Cincinnati's Maketewah clubs, while the women's state title event is booked for July 13-17 at Columbus Country club.

Definite announcement the meets would be held came today as officials of the sponsoring associations decided gasoline rationing would be delayed in this area for at least several weeks.

Mrs. S. B. Kent of Cincinnati, secretary of the Women's Ohio Golf association, and T. Fred Reese, secretary of the O. G. A., said all prizes in the championships would be in the form of war bonds and stamps.

The women's tournament gets under way July 13 with an 18-hole qualifier, in which 16 will fight their way into the championship flight, with the non-qualifiers getting into lesser groups of 16. Match play continues through Friday, when the 36-hole finals are scheduled.

Miss Neoma Copic of Toledo, winner of the state publinks crown in 1939, but now a private club member, is defending women's champion. She faces tough opposition, however, from Mrs. Linton Fallis of Toledo, champion in 1939 and 1940, and Mrs. Burt Weil of Cincinnati, who dominated the feminine scene from 1934 through 1937.

The men have a pro-amateur in the morning, and an amateur-amateur in the afternoon, to launch their Cincinnati classic July 13. On Tuesday an 18-hole medal play qualifier is booked, with 63 gaining title flight spots along with defending champion Frankie Stranahan of Toledo, who gets his place without playing the 18-hole test.

Two rounds of match play are scheduled Wednesday and Thursday, and the four survivors stage the 36-hole semi-finals Friday, with the 36-hole finals Saturday.

Bob Servis of Dayton, winner of the amateur in 1933, 1936, 1939 and 1940, has not announced whether he would enter this year's play, but Stranahan, one of the youngest star ever to take the title, is certain to run into rough opposition from Neil Ransick of Cincinnati, 1935 king, and Maurice J. McCarthy, also of Cincinnati, who won in 1934, 1937 and 1938.

Public links players are eligible for each tournament, but in the men's event the "pay as you play" representation is limited to the state and district champions and runners-up. No entry fee will be charged the public links guests in the men's tourney, and they will be eligible only for the championship flight.

Jack Martin of the Maketewah club, president of the Ohio Golf association, will be inducted into the army July 13, the day the amateur opens, and a committee of Cincinnati golfers will take over his duties during the championship play.

Just Name the Sport---Dorothy Does It

Dorothy Latta . . . bats .400 in softball.

. . . shoots golf in low 80s

By KEITH KING
(Wide World Features Writer)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Just name the sport and Dorothy Latta will play it—and give you a better than fair exhibition of it, too.

Six years ago Miss Latta, a compactly-built lass of 27, knew nothing of any sport but iceskating, at which she had become proficient at her home in Des Moines, Iowa, and for which she still yearns nostalgically.

Now the five-foot-five, 132-pound secretary for the Tennessee Valley Authority shoots golf in the low 80's, bowls an average of 170, hits around .400 as a softball second sacker and wields a tennis racket in a winning way.

And if you need a steady defensve player for your basketball team, Dorothy will fill in at guard; if it's badminton you suggest, you'd better be good. She's adept, too, at roller skating.

But all's not outdoors and athletic effort with the energetic miss. She prefers to waltz, but if the rhythm is right and a jitterbug partner is inclined, a bit of "rug cutting" is o. k. with her.

Dorothy has won the Knoxville city women's bowling championship for the last three years, was a member of a softball team which captured four consecutive city titles, and last year she was runner-up for medalist honors in the city golf championship, later taking the measure of the defending champion.

Her friends insist she could become a champion if she would put all her efforts into one sport, and this Dorothy acknowledges.

But says she, "I just can't bear to give any of them up. They're all great fun and I'm planning to keep right on with all of them as long as I can."

Writer Says Providents Will Be There In Tourney

By RODGER NELSON

COLUMBUS—(INS)—The seventh inning stretch:

That loud noise that will rudely awaken you from a deep dream of peace on the afternoon of the Fourth of July will just be the reopening of the Hamilton race track in Butler county . . . and not firecrackers because state officials are clamping down on the sale of such with more intensity than ever before.

The Hamilton race oval, fast becoming one of the most popular half-mile tracks in the middle west, is heading into its third season since the revival of the bangtail chasing in the Ohio Valley region . . . officials of the track are anticipating such a large turnout Independence day that the infield is being made ready to accommodate the overflow.

Twilight racing will prevail every day at the track with the exception of Saturdays when the first race starts at 2:15 p. m. . . . Veteran horsemen freely predict that a number of new track records will be established during the 19-day meeting.

A grand total of 450 horses representing 115 stables are on hand awaiting the "they're off" cry.

A little farther north, eight miles northeast of Mt. Gilead to be exact, the Ohio Rifle and Pistol association will be conducting its annual state tournament. . . . Firing begins Saturday and will be concluded Sunday.

* * *

Defending champions are expected to be on hand en masse. . . . The Forest City Rifle club (Cleveland) will be in the thick of the firing in defense of its team laurels as will the Ohio outdoor champ, Bill Patriquin . . . Patriquin is a member of the Forest City squad.

Bob Lausten of Port Clinton will be trying to make it three junior championships in succession.

The annual meeting and election of trustees of the association will be held on the evening of July 4 at the range. . . . Main topic of discussion will be "increased activity in establishing schools of marksmanship instruction."

The state girls sofeball championship team, Provident Loans of Mansfield, are finding it tough sledding (as usual) to maintain a winning average in games played during the season . . . the Providents recently dropped a 3-0 contest to J. & K. Shoes of Columbus to add to their mounting woes. . . . It is this column's guess, though, that the smart money will be riding on them when tournament time rolls around . . . they have always asserted themselves as strictly a "tournament team."

* * *

Balloting has started for the third annual Eastern Ohio-Northern, West Virginia all-star football game August 20 . . . arrangements are being completed for the stars to train at Bethany college for about 10 days prior to the event which takes place in Wheeling high's stadium . . . all proceeds of the game over expenses will be turned over to the Navy Relief fund.

* * *

Al Burazio is "retiring" while at the top of the heap. . . . Burazio coached the Tiltonville baseball team to the state championship this last spring and has now enlisted in the army air corps.

* * *

While Tiltonville loses a mentor, Hamilton high school picks one up. . . . Dana King, former Ohio U. star and more recently pilot of the Cincinnati Bengals pro football team, has been hired to coach the Big Blue again. . . . Some years ago King held the reigns of Hamilton but resigned in favor of a similar post at the University of Cincinnati.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—Reminder: Tomorrow is Independence day, traditionally given over to recreation and patriotic observance. . . . It also is USO day, when spectators at sports events in many places will be asked to contribute, and the day when most tennis and golf clubs will hold Red Cross tournaments . . . Get the idea? . . . The famous battery of George Earnshaw and Mickey Cochrane will be reunited when Mickey's Great Lakes navy players get a workout against Fort Custer, reinforced by army members of the all-star service squad, at Detroit tomorrow.

SHORT SPORT STORY.

Last spring 20-year-old Bob Chesnes failed to make the grade as a pitcher with the San Francisco Seals and was farmed out to San Jose of the California league. . . . He didn't get much fielding support there and one day, right in the middle of a game, he stalked off the mound. . . . "I can play shortstop better than that," he growled, taking his place in the infield. . . . He did. Now he's regarded as a very promising short fielder.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR.

Jimmy Murphy, Canton, Ill., Daily Ledger: "What's wrong with the Cardinals? That question is being asked wherever baseball is discussed. The answer is found in the National league statistics—runs batted in, Mize, New York, first; hits, Mize first; home runs, Mize first; runs scored, Mize second. . . . The Cards certainly cannot be called Mize-rly this season."

CHARLESTON LOSES TO LAST PLACERS

SPRINGFIELD—(AP)—Springfield's manager "Smoky" Alton homered with a mate aboard in the seventh inning to give the Cardinals a 7 to 6 win over Dayton in the first game of a Mid-Atlantic league doubleheader last night, but Springfield dropped the nightcap 8 to 2.

Last-place Zanesville knocked off league-leading Charleston 6 to 2, while Canton nosed out Erie 3 to 2.

SHELBY—Nearly 100 swimmers have enrolled in the Red Cross swimming life saving classes at the Seltzer park pool here, Robert Winters, Red Cross instructor, revealed today.

The Intermediate classes are being discontinued.

Plans are being completed for a water show later in the summer.

ARMSTRONG HELD 2 TO 1 FAVORITE

DENVER—(INS)—Hammering Henry Armstrong, evidently taken seriously in his warning that he can't afford to drop any decisions during his comeback campaign, today was a 2 to 1 favorite—with few takers—to defeat Denver's Reuben Shank tonight.

The little Los Angeles Negro welterweight will weigh in at 141 pounds, three less than Shank, for the scheduled 10-round clash in City auditorium. Shank split two decisions with Fritzie Zivic in Minneapolis recently. Zivic lifted Armstrong's welter crown.

COON CHASE BOOKED FOR JULY FOURTH

A $100 guaranteed final purse has been set up for the 'coon chase to be promoted tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Oak Park, six miles east of Mansfield on Route 30, by Roy Metz.

Some of the best dogs in this section of the state are expected to be entered.

Thrown Wheel Gives Thrill

But Russo Gets Biggest Kick at Indianapolis.

ASHLAND — Have you ever wondered how it would be to lose a wheel off the old family bus while clipping along ahound 80 or 85 miles per hour? Paul Russe, star of the Indianapolis Speedway who will drive in the seven event program Saturday afternoon on the Ashland county fairgrounds half-mile oval can tell you.

Langhorne was the track where an elder brother, Joe, had been killed in a racing accident. Paul's wheel left him a few feet from the very spot where his brother died.

If Paul had thought of it at all, he would have considered it an unimportant coincidence. All he thought at the time, he says, was to stop the careening race car and hold it outside the grandstand.

"I gave it the brake and steered the way the car was tilting," he said.

The wheel left the car just as he entered the turn on the mile track. Russe finally stopped his mechanized mount when it had completed the turn and entered the backstretch.

But that wasn't much of a thrill for Russo who has been racing a dozen years (he's only 28 now), but his big thrill was in qualifying for the first time at Indianapolis Speedway.

There was also the time when he was only 14 and big brother Joe was due to race at Milwaukee Fair. Paul lives in Kenosha, Wis. Joe allowed him to warm up his race car in front of the huge crowd. A couple of years later he was allowed to ride with Joe in a practice spin at Indianapolis.

From then on Paul Russo was a race car driver. In 1940 he made the grade at Indianapolis, but his car broke down. Last year he qualified with the fifth fastest time recorded at the "brick-yard," 125.217 mph, and finished ninth in the 500-mile grind despite having the smallest motor in the field and being bothered with a bad oil leak from the start. He'd have been back this year only the big race was called off.

Association Race Proves Tight Fit

(By Associated Press)

The chase in the merry American association still was at tight as a new shoe today with Columbus having the closest fit after jamming into third place.

Kansas City pasted Indianapolis, 10 to 2, last night, for a good grip on the league lead, but the next four places in the standings remained tightly laced.

The Red Birds blanked the Millers, 2-0, behind Pitcher Ted Wilks' four-hitter.

* * *

Tony Fiarito delivered Louisville's 6-2 win over Milwaukee. He poled a homer with bases filled in the eighth.

Harder Picked For Night Tilt

Has Low-Run Record For Games Under Lights.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Some hurlers are know as "Sunday pitchers" but Cleveland's comeback man of the mound, Mel Harder, is building a reputation as a "Friday night hurler."

The Indians returned today from Chicago, where they swept the four game series with the White Sox, and ordered the veteran Harder to don his spectacles and serve the spheres to the Detroit Tigers.

It will be the third consecutive Friday evening on the hill for Master Mel, who lost to Boston 3-2 last week but beat New York 5-4 the previous Friday. His seasonal record of five victories and six defeats includes another nocturnal triumph, a 2-1 decision over Chicago.

Last night's 7-5 scalping of the Pale Hose was credited to Chubby Dean, who permitted one run and three hits in eight innings and then had to be rescued by Joe Heving from a Windy City uprising in the final frame.

* * *

Cleveland led all the way, tallying one in the second inning and another in the fifth, and although Chicago also scored in the fifth, the Redskins pushed over three big runs to make it look certain in the seventh. The three markers came on two errors, a walk, a balk, singles by Dean and Jeff Heath, and a 400-foot double by Les Fleming.

Cleveland punched over two more tallies in the ninth on Ray Mack's triple, singles by Jim Hegan and Dean, Oris Hockett's long fly.

Lineups Given For Star Game

Cooper Brothers Seen as Starting Battery.

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK—(AP)— The public was given a peep today at the probable starting lineups for the Major League All-Star show that will be staged in the gloaming at the Polo grounds Monday.

* * *

Neither Joe McCarthy nor Leo Durocher, the rival managers, was able to name his starting pitcher because of the two doubleheaders that face every club in the big leagues this week-end. But assuming that righthanded hurlers are on the mound at the beginning, the batting orders tentatively will be:

* * *

American League.

D. DiMaggio, Boston, rf
Boudreau, Cleveland, ss
Williams, Boston, lf
J. DiMaggio, New York, cf
McQuinn, St. Louis, 1b

Vaughan, Brooklyn, 3b
Reiser, Brooklyn, cf
Mize, New York, 1b

Miller, Boston, ss

Mort Cooper, star of the St. Louis Cardinals, is almost certain to be the opening pitcher for the National League and Durocher specified that his younger brother, Walker Cooper, would do his receiving.

The identity of the American's starting pitcher is a mystery and the assignment might fall to almost anyone of the nine hurlers on the squad, with one of the Yankees, Red Ruffing, Ernie Bonham or Spud Chandler, favored.

CHAPTER XXII

Shortly after Kay arrived at National Candy the morning following her sight-seeing tour with Ronnie, Burge, head of the department, sent for her.

He cleared his throat in his best executive manner, then said, "About that idea for pralines, Miss Kenyon, I talked it over with the head. He thinks it might do. Of course the way you presented it, it's immature. Closer consideration might prove it unfeasible."

"Of course," Kay agreed, cheerfully. "I realize how inadequate it must seem. Sort of a shot in the dark. I was searching for an idea, and it just popped out."

Burge cleared his throat again. He removed his eye-glasses, placed them carefully atop the pile of papers in front of him. One had to be severe with these young idiots who wanted to run before they could walk.

He said, "In National, we do not use the kind of ideas that pop out. We use the kind that are worked out carefully, with the maximum of thought for every detail."

"Yes sir," Kay said, accepting the reprimand with good grace. "I'm working on the details now."

"When may I expect them? The prospectus, any comments you might make. Go into the subject thoroughly, but remember, time is money at National."

"I hope to finish my report by noon. I've made the first draft, but I want to go over it again, check on suggestions and fill in any gaps I find. You could have it now, Mr. Burge . . . but what you just said about working carefully . . ."

"Noon will do," Burge snapped. "Send whatever you have to my desk."

* * *

When Kay returned to her desk her hands were all thumbs and lumps of ice. I'm not measuring up, she told herself. I'm a novice. I can't keep the pace. 'Louisiana Belles' isn't so good. And still . . . I'm sure if they'll give me a chance to carry it through . . ."

Ed Ellis stopped at Kay's desk. He had a handful of drawings, and apparently the visit was purely casual.

"Don't mind Sour-pan," he said, screening his advice with a broad grin. "You got him cold turkey. Whenever he puts down his glasses and looks at you like he's Professor Mean Quiz, you've got his number. It's when he pulls the crooked smile, rubs his hands and acts pleased as punch that you can look for the two weeks' notice in your next pay envelope."

Kay countered with a grin. "Thanks for the tip. The professional air made me . . . shaky. I'm an amateur, you know."

"So was Burge, one time or another. I don't know what you have under way, but whatever it is, it's the stuff or the boss wouldn't have parked his glasses."

"Thanks again. Sometime I hope to be able to repay . . ."

"Forget it. We're all in this together Bigger and better National Candy. O. K. now?"

"Look, friend, if I felt any stronger I'd go outside and push over this large red brick mountain with my two bare hands."

Ellis said, "Oh, yes, the paper I was bringing you." He placed a folded sheet on Kay's desk, then hurried along. Kay opened the folded sheet. It was blank. Other eyes in the office were returned to their respective objective. They did not see the blank. Office parlezvous.

Kay sent her congealed idea for selling pralines and the draft of the display for "Louisiana Belles" to Burge's desk two ticks of the clock before noon, her lunch hour. Giving the packet of papers a final glance she wondered how she had dared do them. Amateur? The sketchy commercial course she had taken in Somerset high school. Short hand. Typewriting. A bore. She was Kay Kenyon of the Younger Set. What would short hand and typewriting have to do with her?

Without purpose, Kay found herself in the sandwich shop from which she had made such a hasty exit day before yesterday. The waitress in daffodil yellow with a pert white organdy cap on her blond curls was the one who had been startled by Kay's hasty departure.

"If you didn't like the sandwich we served the other day," she said, "we've a special today. Chicken salad."

Kay said with a feeling of having let a fellow worker down, "Oh . . . the sandwich was perfect. I mean . . . I'm sure it was perfect. It wasn't the sandwich. I suddenly remembered there was something I had to do. I had to get back to the office."

"You . . . work . . . in an office?" The waitress, obviously, was skeptical.

"Yes. I'm with National Candy."

"National Candy? That's up by Lafayette, a few blocks away."

"Right. I'm in the merchandising department. "Why was she explaining herself? Kay did not know.

The waitress gave Kay a long look. "You don't look like a white collar girl to me."

"White collar? I don't understand. What do I look like . . . to you?"

"You look like one o' them mink coat babies who've been brought up on lobster and old lace. S'cuse, the manager's calling. What was that sandwich?"

"Bring the chicken salad special," Kay said. "It sounds expensive. I'll live up to my picture if it takes the last penny in my pocketbook."

The waitress said, "Don't pay me no mind. I'll see you get what you want, and good. You're regular. After you've worked in a food place for a while you're able to shake the shorts from the longs. You'd be s-prised."

* * *

Kay came back to her desk in National Candies. What to do now? One did not sit in this office, idly. Was there something she might have overlooked on "Louisiana Belles?" Perhaps. But that was behind her. There would be another idea, imperative.

The telephone.

"Call for you, Miss Kenyon."

Kay answered. The phone was in the open. Office ears listened. Ronnie.

"Hi, Red." Ronnie was as detached as the ambient air. "How about a bite and a bottle? The Persian Room, Eight o'clock. Says which?"

"Can't make it," Kay said. "I'm working at the office this evening on a new project."

"Project or no project," Ronnie said, "You must eat. When do you get out from under the yoke? I'll meet you in front of the factory. We could barge over to Chinatown. I know a place there, too."

"At six o'clock." Kay said. "I'll have only an hour."

"I'll be waiting for you at the main entrance, at six o'clock. The big one with the neon lights."

"I don't come out that side," Kay said. I leave at the other end of the building, through the employes' door."

"I'll find it," Ronnie said. "I'll be Stage Door Ronnie."

Kay said, "Thanks for calling."

Ronnie said, "Hey Red, you sound like a foreigner. Anything wrong? If those sweetie pies are giving you a run-around . . ."

Kay said, with dignity, "Six o'clock. And thanks again for calling."

She hung up the receiver.

Picture Returns.

"Sergeant York," exciting story of America's World War I hero, is returning to Mansfield Saturday to show at popular prices at the Ohio theater. The picture starring Gary Cooper in the title role will play one week. Cooper, who won the Film Academy award for his performance of the lanky Tennessee lad who captured 132 Germans almost single-handed, is supported by Joan Leslie, Walter Brennan, Margaret Wycherly and Dickie Moore. Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Two books for children designed to make them more conscious of Independence day and the present fight for democracy are now in the children's department of the Mansfield Public Library.

AMERICANS EVERY ONE, by Lavinia R. Davis is a collection of short stories which describe the difficulty that children from a foreign country have in getting adjusted to our American ways. Philip, an English boy was laughed at because of the way he used a bat, and Chena from Czechoslovakia could not even catch a ball. These timely stories carry a message in hospitality which is truly for Americans every one.

TORCH OF LIBERTY, by Frederic A. Kummer is also a collection of stories—stories from the struggle of mankind for freedom. Beginning with the early Greeks, continuing through the Middle Ages and right down to the evacuation of Dunkirk, these episodes show how men and women have fought for democracy, always holding its torch high, even though the road to freedom is not easy.

DE SEVERSKY ON AIR POWER NEW ON BOOK LIST

Library Announces Additions To Shelves In Fiction, Non-Fiction Classes.

A wholly new conception of air strategy and a program for an Allied victory through unrestricted use of air power is set down in "Victory Through Air Power," a new title at the Mansfield Public library, by Alexander De Seversky.

One of the foremost airplane designers and aeronautical authorities in America and a fighting pilot in the last war, the author explains how air power has won all the crucial battles to date and explains why the United States is ideally equipped to use that weapon and take the offensive against the Axis.

The necessity of defeating, soon and completely, the evil forces loosed by the Nazis upon the world is emphasized by Henry J. Thomas, a leading economist, in another new title, "Time Runs Out."

Thomas, who left Europe the day before Hitler declared war upon the United States, sets down his experiences in Nazi-dominated Europe after studying conditions in England, Sweden, Germany, Switzerland, France and Spain.

BY PAN AMERICAN HIGHWAY THROUGH SOUTH AMERICA by Herbert C. Lanks is a fascinating travel and guide-book which describes fully and in detail the first journey made by automobile from the Caribbean to the Straits of Magellan. This long and hazardous tour included visits to all the capitals excepting those of Paraguay and the Guianas. The text is accompanied with 40 pages of photographs taken by the author.

Two popular books written by Jean Aaberg are as follows:

DON'T PHONE MOTHER, of bride's first reader, or short cuts to successful housekeeping, and dedicated to all brides: (brides to be, brides that are, and brides that were).

BABIES ARE FUN, an amusing treatise on first babies, based on sound medical advice with a common-sense approach. Clothes, diet, discipline and development up to two years are included.

Historical fiction is again coming to the fore. Several interesting new titles are being added to the library shelves

WINDWARD PASSAGE by Hamilton Cochran is a tempestuous love story with Henry Morgan, the scourge of the Spanish Main for its hero. In 1671, Morgan led his buccaneer horde to attack Spain's golden New World city, Panama, and, it is against this backdrop that the author weaves his novel of a man spurred to reckless valor by a curious admixture of motive: greed of gold, desire for a beautiful and unscrupulous woman, and a patriotism that had been nearly stifled in his ruthless heart.

BRIGHT TO THE WANDERER by Bruce Lancaster, author of "Guns of Burgoyne," is a novel which has for its theme the Upper Canadian rebellion of 1837. However, it is also the story of the Stensrood family, originally Loyalist refugees from the United States. The principal character is young Gilbert Stensrood, who joins with William Lyon Mackenzie in his fight against the corrupt Family Compact.

FORWARD THE NATION by Donald Culross Peattie is the story of the Lewis and Clarke expedition up the Missouri, through the wilderness to the Pacific and back, and of the Indian girl, Sacajawea, who guided the expedition so efficiently. Although told in fiction form, this is based entirely on facts.

OTHER FICTION

INTRUDERS IN EDEN—Stringer.

HOPALONG CASSIDY SERVES A WRIT—Mulford.

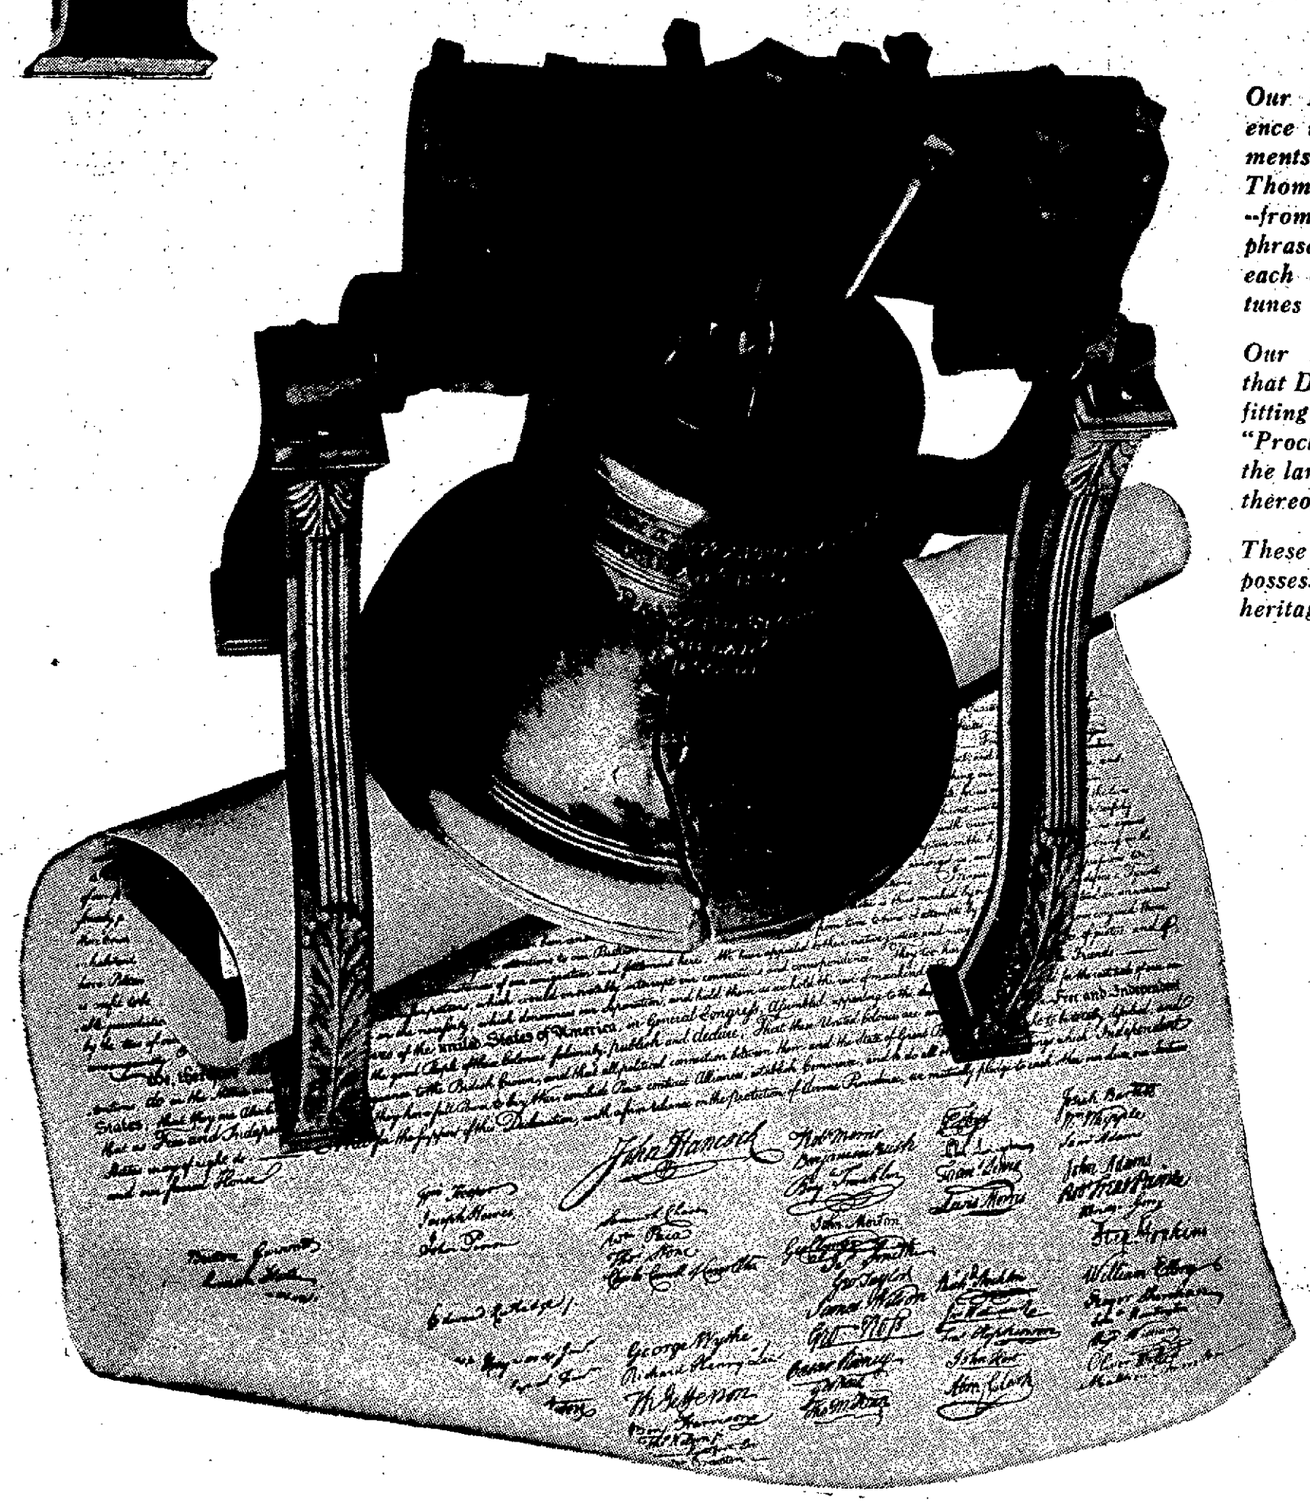
Independence Day

BIRTHDAY OF A GREAT DEMOCRACY



Our Declaration of Independence is one of the great documents of liberty of all time! Thomas Jefferson was its author --from its title to that last, vital phrase "we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred Honor!"

Our Liberty Bell announced that Declaration's adoption as is fitting the inscription it bears -- "Proclaim liberty through all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

These two then, are our dearest possessions -- the most precious heritage for which we can fight.

ENJOYMENT of the freedoms symbolized by our Declaration of Independence and our Liberty Bell carries with it a deep responsibility! For it is not enough that we be free — we are fighting now that all peoples of the world may be equally free. Whereas in bondage there is degradation, in liberty there is the soaring spirit that leads to achievement . . . and to a better world. That our four freedoms may be all mankind's four freedoms, we are now engaged in a struggle that must have but one outcome—and that, Victory! On tomorrow's birth-date of our Independence Day, let us each pledge ourselves toward bringing about that Victory whatever it may entail! Let us pledge ourselves—particularly those of us who can fight no other way—to the regular, payday purchase of United States War Savings Bonds, gladly devoting 10% of our income toward our own and our childrens future . . . toward the future liberty of all children, everywhere!

JAR DONATIONS SUPPORT CHURCH

ORLEANS, Mass. —(U.P.)— Cape Cod folks sometimes call the Holy Spirit (Episcopal) church here the "ginger jar church."

Since the parish was founded nine years ago it has been supported by offerings placed in a ginger jar at the door.

The church services, formerly held in a ship's deckhouse that was salvaged from a wreck, are presided over by the Rev. Richard B. Kimball, who was a business man until his 64th birthday, when he was ordained a minister.

MILD RECOVERY TENDENCY SEEN IN STOCK LIST

Retail Spending Improves In South, and Pacific Coast States.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks generally displayed further mild recovery tendencies in today's market transactions.

Gainers of fractions included U. S. Steel, Sears Roebuck, Chrysler, Southern Railway Pennsylvania, Boeing and Western Union. Off a shade were Douglas Aircraft, Phelps Dodge, Bethlehem Steel and Greyhound corporation.

Those watching merchandising share trends for market clues noted the Dun & Bradstreet summary which disclosed that, while some improvement in retail spending was recorded this week in the south and on the Pacific coast, the lag behind last year's dollar volume for the country as a whole was placed at 3 to 7 per cent.

Confirmation of the purchasing timidity was seen in the estimate of the federal reserve board that the nation's department store sales for the week ended June 27 were 8 per cent below the corresponding 1941 period.

Horse, Buggy Solve His Tire Problem

Edgar U. Beverage has his own solution for the transportation problem, as shown above. From his home two and one-half miles east of Mansfield on Route 30, he comes to work daily in his buggy, drawn by his trusty horse, Bob Beverage, a trimmer at Art Rattan Works, found a stall near the plant and "parks" Bob and buggy there during the day. Beverage said he is glad to help conserve gasoline, and besides he is saving the tires on his car for a trip to Elkins, W. Va, his home town. Driving to town by buggy means that he has to get up a half hour earlier, for the trip takes Bob 45 minutes. In addition to his job in town, Beverage works four acres of the 30-acre farm on which he lives, with his wife and son. Shown with him above is his brother, Floyd.

FARMERS START BIG HARVEST

Wheat Crop One of Best In Recent Years, Agent Says; Storage Puzzle Ahead.

With elevators and private storage bins in the county already overflowing with old wheat, farmers are building new bins and looking for additional storage space for their new crop.

Meanwhile, the county AAA office today had notified farmers to call for their marketing quota cards which entitle them to sell their wheat without paying a penalty on excess bushels.

The cards will be issued at the AAA office in Mansfield to farmers who comply with the government wheat acreage allotments or will harvest less than 15 acres of wheat Wheat growers who market wheat above their allotments will be required to pay the government penalty on excess grain.

New car sales in Richland county showed a slight gain last month, but it was the second month this year in which no new trucks were sold in the county.

Car sales jumped to 17 from 12 in May Three new trucks were sold in May, however, as against none last month. February was the other month in which no trucks were sold.

AT LAST, HERE'S TRUE STORY OF THAT FUR-BEARING TROUT

By SIGRID ARNE

WHITEFISH, Mont — (Wide World)— Maybe you were one who kept friends bug-eyed with the story of the fur-bearing trout

Remember? It burst on a startled world in the early '20s.

It lived in Iceberg lake in the Montana Rockies It had a fur coat instead of scales to protect it from the burning cold of the lake It hunted fat ice worms for dinner, and the men who fished for it had to heat their hooks first It often exploded, once landed, just from the sudden change in temperature.

That fish was one of the minor national preoccupations of its time. The news streaked across the country, and scientists gave out statements.

Startled fishermen streaked for Glacier park, and Iceberg lake, to land one.

There were cooler-headed brethren who gave off sounds like "horse feathers!"

The horsefeathers boys, of course, were right. Various and sundry wits have repeated the stunt elsewhere, but in Montana
